Postal strike looms in May

Union slams employer grievance procedures

VANCOUVER (CP) — Postal union locals across the country are gearing up for a strike that could begin as early as May.

The Vancouver president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers says his local has no choice but to prepare for a strike "in view of the intransigent position of the employer" in conciliation talks.

Lloyd Ingram denounced the attitude of post office management before the conciliation board in Ottawa, and said the local "is left with no alternative but to finalize its strike structure."

Similar statements were being issued by CUPW locals across Canada, he said.

In Montreal, vice-president of that CUPW local, Richard Forget told a news conference that the union's Quebec locals are gearing up for a strike vote as soon as a federal conciliation team submits its report, expected within the next two weeks.

The union is seeking maintenance of job levels, clarification of existing clauses on compulsory overtime and technologocal change, and improved wages.

"Unless there is some compromise on the part of the Post Office, I don't see how a strike can be avoided," Forget said. "They insist on rolling back all the rights we've acquired since our first contract in 1968."

Clement Morel, a member of the national executive of the union, said there has been virtually no progress at bargaining sessions since they began last November. The last contract expired December, 1978.

Morel said the Post Office has ignored precedents established through the grievance procedure and insists on fighting each of the tens of thousands of outstanding grievances individually.

He said almost 60 per cent of the 30,000 outstanding complaints are related to earlier decisions and could be settled on that basis. Each arbitration is currently costing the government $15,000, Morel said.

A three-member conciliation board headed by retired Quebec judge Germain Jutras has been meeting with union and management negotiators in an attempt to reach a compromise settlement without a repeat of the October, 1978, national strike.

In Vancouver, Ingram said Jutras has told the parties he will end the talks on Monday if no progress is being made. If conciliation fails, Jutras has two weeks, or longer if needed, to write his report to the government.

The union would be in a legal position to strike seven days after that report is received.

Saudis in uproar over film

LONDON (AP) — The British government expressed "profound regret" today to Saudi Arabia about the screening of a television drama based on the 1977 execution of a Saudi princess and her lover, the British Foreign Office said.

Reports reaching London said the Saudis threatened to break diplomatic relations with Britain, cut off oil supplies and suspend hundreds of millions of dollars in contracts with British firms.

The producers of the film said the program was a dramatized documentary of a scandal that led to the death of Princess Mishaal of Saudi Arabia and her lover in 1977. One scene depicts the lover kneeling beneath an executioner's sword with the body of the princess lying nearby, shot to death.

Sources close to the film said the Saudi government offered "a huge sum of money" to try to stop Britain's ATV independent network from screening the dramatized documentary, but the offer was rejected.

The movie, Death of a Princess, was shown Wednesday night. The U.S. public television network plans to air it later this month, it was reported here. The film was made in conjunction with television companies in the United States, the Netherlands and West Germany.

Charles Denton, head of ATV programming, said Saudi officials previewed the film earlier this week. They had put pressure on the network to cancel or change the film over several months, he said.

"We were unable to see their problems with it and did not change a frame of the film as a result," Denton said.

British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington sent a "message of profound regret" to Saudi Prince Saud about "any offence which the film may have caused," said a Foreign Office spokesman.

"We regret any damage which might be done to Anglo-Saudi relations," the spokesman said. "But of course the government has no power to interfere with the content of a program of this nature."

In the film, the princess, played by an Egyptian actress, rebels against her arranged marriage and goes to Beirut, where she falls in love with a fellow university student. She returns to Saudi Arabia and lives openly with her lover. She admits the adultery in a trial and the lovers are condemned and put to death.

Newspaper accounts published after the execution said the princess was put to death because she rejected an arranged betrothal and married a commoner, and her lover was beheaded. Those reports made no mention of adultery.

Cabinet plumps for F-18A

OTTAWA (CP) — McDonnell Douglas Corp., manufacturer of the F-18A, has been awarded the contract to equip the armed forces with new fighter aircraft, Defence Minister Gilles Lamontagne announced today.

The final decision to buy a minimum of 137 of the twin-engined aircraft — over its competitor, the single-engined F-16 built by General Dynamics Corp. — was made by cabinet earlier in the day.

No final contract price was stated but cost of the planes has been previously estimated at more than $2.3 billion.

The process of the selecting the aircraft, to replace aging CF-101 Voodoos, CF-104 Starfighters and C-5 aircraft now used in North American and NATO defence roles, began in 1975.

But the decision has been dragged out until now because of delays caused by two elections in the last year and wrangles over the distribution of industrial benefits of the contract.

Juvenile correction setup on verge of chaos: report

By DEREK SIDENIUS

And unless alternative ways are found in the community to handle juvenile offenders, chaos will result, the chairman of the Capital Region Justice Council said today.

Dave Turner issued the warning after a report on the provincial juvenile containment program was made public.

Turner said the justice council is so concerned about the situation it has teamed up with the Victoria Family Court Committee and the John Howard Society of Vancouver Island to seek a meeting with Attorney-General Alan Williams.

The report, prepared last fall by Coquitlam probation officer Alan Markwart, said the juvenile containment centres in Burnaby and Victoria are dangerously overcrowded and said one reason for the development is a lack of alternative placement centres in the province.

Del Phillips, director of the Victoria Youth Detention Centre said today the centre has exceeded its 20-bed capacity by as much as 50 per cent in recent months.

Today's count was 24, including 14 on remand and 10 sentenced.

Turner said he is appalled at the revelations in Markwart's report which notes:

— More than half the children contained in juvenile institutions have not committed offences regarded as either dangerous or potentially dangerous to the community.

— A panel of three corrections experts has determined that containment is inappropriate for 45.2 per cent of the juveniles in custody.

— Nearly 85 per cent of probation officers have specifically recommended containment without coming up with alternatives.

— The procedures for recommending containment as laid down by the attorney-general were followed in only one third of all cases; and that, when combined with legislative criteria, the procedures were followed in only 21.9 per cent of the cases.

— There are sufficient provincial resources such as House of Concord, group

Sears, Bay credit 26%

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two of Canada's major department stores are boosting their charge account rates to 26.08 per cent.

The required six-month notices of the increase will be mailed out with the next monthly statement to customers.

The new rate will be 1.95 per cent a month or 23.4 per cent a year. Calculated on the basis of it being a monthly rate, the effective annual rate will be 26.08 per cent.

Other department stores are holding their rates — for the time being.

"We are not contemplating any increase in the rate," said Bruce Stocks, credit manager for T. Eaton Co. Ltd. "However, it will be reviewed on a week to week basis."

Peter Wilhelmsen, credit manager for Woodward Stores Ltd., said he has had no instructions to raise the charge account rate of 20.4 per cent a year, which he said was lower than other stores.

Game fix remark may halt playoff

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Threat of a legal injunction to halt a Western Hockey League playoff game between Victoria and the Seattle Breakers tonight "is a possibility" because of a Victoria player's televised suggestion Cougars may not attempt to win it.

The threat, said Portland Winter Hawk manager Brian Shaw, was made by a Portland attorney, "not connected with our hockey team," as a result of an interview of Victoria centre Barry Pederson was televised late Wednesday by Portland station KATU.

Crux of the controversy is the second berth in the Western Division's best-of-seven final. Victoria, with a 5-2, won-lost record, already is assured of the first spot. Seattle (4-3) can take the second berth by defeating the Cougars tonight, eliminating division-winning Portland (3-5).

If Victoria wins tonight, Seattle and Portland would be forced into a sudden-death playoff game to decide the issue.

McGeer puts island link plans to cabinet

The provincial cabinet is expected today to approve Science Minister Pat McGeer's proposal to spend between $500,000 and $1 million on a feasibility study of a Vancouver Island-mainland bridge-cum-tunnel link.

(Public opinion in Victoria as reflected in the poll being conducted by the Times is running about 5 to 3 against the proposal in early returns. Deadline for ballots to be delivered to the Times' office is 9 a.m. Friday. Due to heavy volume of ballots, results of the poll and readers' comments will not be published until Monday).

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis has already said a study is needed so voters will know what's at stake when they vote on the issue in a possible, province-wide plebiscite.

A decision on the plebiscite idea is probably a year down the road — about the time the feasibility study would be completed.

Each route involves one or more of the Gulf Islands.

The longest and most northerly route would take a long jump from Sturgeon Bank on the Fraser River to the east end of Gabriola Island.

From there it would take short hops to Mudge Island and then to Vancouver Island near Nanaimo.

That route would have no tunnel; instead, 25 kilometres of floating bridge, 8 kilometres of conventional bridge and the rest of the route on land.

A middle route would require 19 kilometres of floating bridge or tunnel from Sandheads at the south arm of the Fraser River on Sturgeon Banks to the north end of Galiano Island. From that point there is a choice of routes via island-hopping bridges, ending either at Nanaimo or Duncan.

The third and most southerly route would extend from Roberts Bank to the south end of Galiano Island, then by bridge to Salt Spring Island and to Vancouver Island near Duncan.

That concept calls for 18 kilometres of bridge and 7.2 kilometres of tunnel.

These proposals likely would permit four-lane vehicle traffic travelling at 80 km/h plus two railway lines.

Meanwhile, Sam Bawlf, the ex-cabinet minister who initiated engineering feasibility studies of a bridge-tunnel two years ago, told the Times Wednesday the best estimate of the cost he's seen is $2-$2.5 billion.

It could be self-financing, according to Bawlf's estimates of $270 million

No rate hike

OTTAWA (CP) — The new Bank of Canada rate is unchanged at 16.20 per cent, the same as last week, the bank announced today. It is the first time there has been no increase in the trend-setting rate since the bank moved to a floating rate system in March.

550 nurses out on strike at health units

Most are employed at public health units.

The nurses walked out at noon for what a union spokesman said was to be a 12-hour strike not affecting essential services.

The disruptive action to back contract demands began Wednesday when 65 nurses at 27 government agencies went on a one-day strike.

So far the nurses have not put up any picket lines to prevent other workers at the agencies and institutions from going to work.

Glen Smale, chief negotiator for the 2,700 nurses, says the strikes will escalate unless there is some movement by the government in meeting the nurses' demands.

About 500 of the nurses on strike today work at public health units and their responsibilities include staffing baby clinics, giving pre-natal classes and public health counselling.

About 60 others work in community mental health clinics, responsible for outpatient care, child-family assessment and counselling.

Eight of the striking nurses, including two in Victoria, work in chest clinics. One other striking nurse in Victoria works in the forensic psychiatric institute.

The government nurses, members of the Registered Nurses Association of B.C. and the Registered Psychiatric Nurses Association of B.C., have promised to keep enough working to maintain essential services — as defined by them — during either rotating strikes or a province-wide shutdown.

The nurses are seeking a 39-per-cent salary increase over 27 months to give them parity with general hospital nurses who have tentatively agreed to a new contract.

The 12,500 registered nurses in the hospitals are to vote May 5 on a 27-month agreement which provides for a 44-per-cent increase in wages with another five per cent in fringe benefits.

The government has offered its nurses eight per cent in each year of a three-year agreement, the same wage package as was accepted last year by other government employees.

The government's position is that its nurses shouldn't be compared to the general hospital nurses because an arbitration award last year tied them to other government employees, including a reduction of the work week to 35 hours.

Boating flare rules changed

The federal transport department's new pyrotechnic distress signal regulations go into effect Monday and will affect all pleasure craft between 5.5 and eight metres in length, the department said Wednesday.

A statement said owners of craft that size will be required to carry six approved distress flares unless they are sailing on rivers, lakes or canals where they will at no time be further than one nautical mile from shore.

They will also be excluded from carrying flares if they are engaged in, or preparing for, a racing competition and are without sleeping quarters. Boats propelled solely by oars and paddles are also excluded from the regulations, the statement said.

Boats less than 5.5 metres long do not require flares and the 12 flares previously required on all craft longer than eight metres must now be of an approved type, it said.

That's based on tolls similar to present ferry fares and takes into account the projected doubling of traffic across Georgia Strait by 1990.

That much money would buy a floating bridge with perhaps one or two sections submerged in tunnels to allow shipping lanes north and south in Georgia Strait, Bawlf said.

He said the technology for this type of structure is available and proven.

"We've come light years in the last 10 years, as opposed to the Hood Canal bridge, which is the biplane of floating bridges," he said.

The Hood Canal bridge, a key link between the Olympic peninsula and the metropolitan Seattle area, folded up and sank in high winds last year with the death of two people.

But its method of construction is very different from that proposed for a the Georgia Strait crossing, Bawlf said.

Instead of a tunnel dug under the rock — like the 32-mile Seikan tunnel between the Japanese islands of Honshu and Hokkaido due to open next year — concrete honeycomb pontoons would be anchored by cable to the bottom of the strait.

They would float in rigid formation about 80 feet below the low tide level. Concrete piers supporting the four-lane roadway 60 or 70 feet above the surface would be founded on the pontoons.

There would be a clear span of 1,500 or 2,000 feet between sets of piers, so coastal shipping such as tugs and barges and fishboats could clear the structure.

There would also be room for double-tracked rapid transit lines down the centre of the bridge for the future, when the bridge has reached its top car-carrying capacity.

The trains could move up to 30,000 people an hour compared with only 3,000 cars an hour in one lane of highway.

"The main crossing of the strait could be as short as 12 miles if you can find a way over, around, across the Gulf Islands," Balf said.

The emotional fears generated by the proposed fixed link with the B.C. mainland were also answered by Bawlf, who until his defeat in the 1979 election was the minister in charge of the B.C. Ferry Corp.

"There's certainly no likelihood of a fixed link landing in the Saanich peninsula. It's going to come ashore somewhere between Duncan and Nanaimo."

It also won't bring hordes of joy-riders and commuters over to the Island.

"It's not going to be free," said Bawlf.

Tolls comparable to present ferry fares would be charged, and Vancouver Island wouldn't turn into another suburb of Vancouver.

homes and Outward Bound programs, to handle 61.6 per cent of the juveniles who wind up in containment centres.

— That 27.4 per cent of the juveniles committed to custody were not repesented by legal counsel at their trials.

— More than two-thirds of the juveniles were wards of the ministry of human resources.

Turner wonders why, if that was the situation last fall, the government has done nothing to change it.

"My concern is probation officers don't seem to get the support or have the energy to develop resources in the communities which the kids come from."

Turner said when containment was set up three years ago it was only intended to be used for hard-core delinquents convicted of more serious offences.

"Just having containment seems to reduce the amount of energy people give to developing other alternatives," he said.

Turner said the community should be permitted to play a larger role.

He noted the government in its Containment Act calls for the establishment of a provincial youth program committee. But the committee has yet to hold its first meeting.

"The solution is ensuring that we are only dealing with kids who should be locked up because they are a danger to the public."

coach Jack Shupe do not deny that the Breakers, third-place finishers, would be easier opponents than Portland in a final series.

According to Shaw: After an 8-2 victory over Portland Tuesday in Memorial Arena, TV interviewer Al Wynn asked Pederson: "Will you throw the game (in Seattle)?"

Shaw, who said he obtained the quotes in a re-run of the interview this morning, said Pederson replied: "Yes, I think you might say that."

Pederson, contacted shortly before Cougars left for Seattle, said he couldn't remember the exact wording.

"I didn't think the guy (interviewer) was serious," said Pederson. "I was being facetious with my answer. I can't remember the exact words, but I think I said 'it was a possibilty,' or something like that."

Commented coach Jack Shupe: "I would hope Barry wasn't serious, if that was his answer."

"One call came from an attorney who said that, on the strength of the interview, we would have no trouble getting an injunction to prevent the playing of tonight's game," said Shaw. "The hockey club has no intention of doing that, but we can't prevent a fan from doing it.

"It was a very bad comment.

"I am not concerned about my hockey club," he continued. "I'm concerned about what it might do to the league. Down here, they do not look lightly on point-shaving and throwing games. It's not like in Canada.

"Now we have to worry about the interview being televised nationally in the U.S.

"The sad thing about those remarks being made for public consumption is this: Cougars could play the best game of their lives tonight, and perhaps Seattle could play just a little better and win it. But there would be no escape (from the situation created)."

A trough of cool unsettled air remains over B.C. but is moving slowly eastwards as a ridge of high pressure moves in from the west. Showers are becoming more widely scattered and the improving trend will continue through Friday as the ridge builds onto the coast. The ridge is followed by another frontal system which is threatening to arrive on the north coast late Friday and move across the province on the weekend.

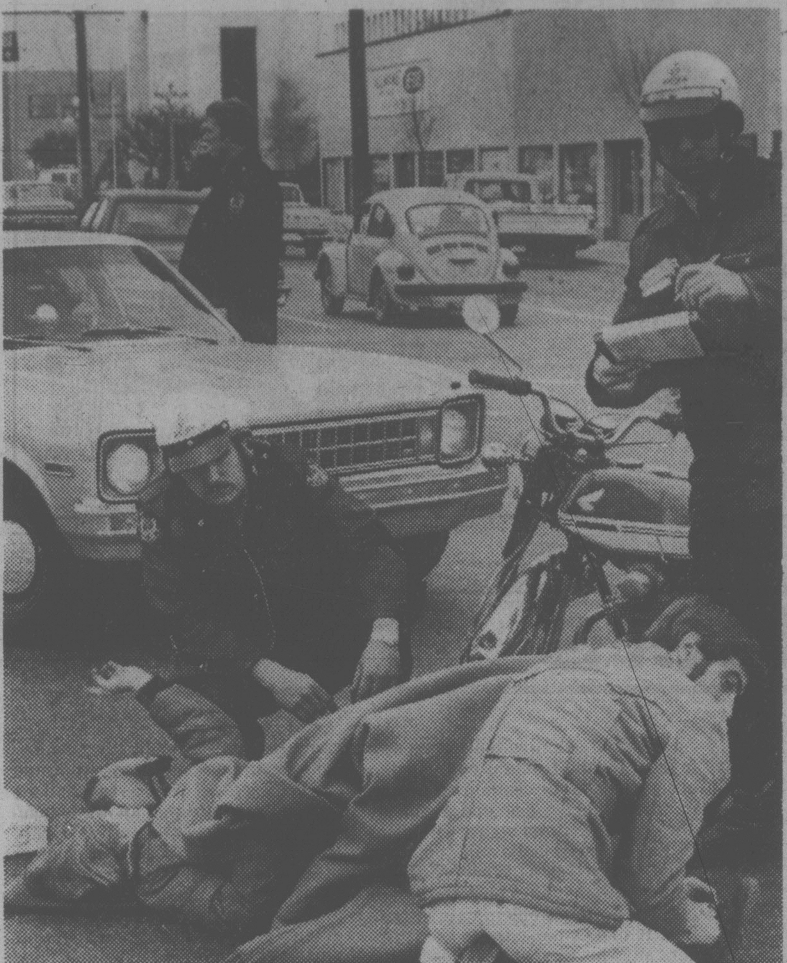
B.C. peaks to erupt next? It's unlikely, experts say



INJURED MOTORCYCLIST Linda Geodbersen, 18, of 6932 Central Saanich, gets first aid at Bay and Douglas following collision with car shortly after 2 p.m. Wednesday. She was taken to Victoria General Hospital and released later in the day after treatment for a badly bruised leg. Driver of the car, Francis Ball, of 4000 Bow, was not hurt. Officers are Constables Ken Weiss and Doug Bond. (Paul Minvielle photo)

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbians can rest assured that the volcanic eruptions that have hit Mount St. Helens in Washington state won't trigger similar eruptions in B.C. mountains.

Although Mount St. Helens belongs to the Cascade chain of mountains which run from northern California to western B.C., "each one of the volcanoes is its own little baby, with each having its own plumbing system," John Clague, a research scientist with the Geological Survey of Canada, said in an interview Wednesday.

Clague said the small quakes occurring under Mount St. Helens are not large enough to be felt more than a few kilometres away and don't have the capacity to affect Washington's other dormant volcanoes.

The only possible effect the eruptions at Mount St. Helens might have on B.C. is the deposit of volcanic ash particles by wind. But Clague says the wind in the Mount St. Helens area normally blows eastward, so the chances of B.C. collecting ash particles are minimal.

And he said, even if the wind direction shifts, the amount of ash southern B.C. would get would not be enough to damage crops.

At Mount St. Helens today, a "harmonic" earth tremor, caused by surging molten rock trapped in underground channels, undulated the mountain for more than 20 minutes, capping a string of renewed seismic stirrings inside the volcano.

A U.S. Forest Service spokesman said the harmonic tremor — a rolling earth movement triggered by pressure brought by trapped lava — occurred at 5:16 a.m. and continued until 5:38 a.m.

It was the first time in four days that the volcano has been rocked by a harmonic tremor, which vulcanologists say are warning signals of the possibility of a lava-spewing eruption.

Clearing weather gave scientists in a spotter airplane a chance for a good look at the north and northwest sides of the growing crater atop the rumbling volcano in southwestern Washington.

One side of the crater has been breaking off, enlarging it considerably and scientists feared this could lead to a massive mud flow into the Toutle River.

Since significant earthquake activity began on the peak March 20, seismographs have recorded more than 100 quakes measuring more than 4.0 on the Richter scale.

Mount Baker, about 120 kilometres southeast of Vancouver, is the only Washington volcano that might cause damage to B.C., said William Slawson, a University of B.C. geophysicist.

A Mount Baker eruption would be felt in the eastern Fraser Valley, Slawson said. Mount Baker last erupted in the 19th century.

Southwestern B.C. has three mountains with a history of volcanic activity. They are: Mount Cayley, 32 kilometres west of Whistler Mountain, Garibaldi Mountain and Meager Mountain, 65 kilometres west of Pemberton. All are about 100 kilometres north of Vancouver.

Of the three, Clague said only Mount Garibaldi has been dormant for more than 10,000 years. Meager Mountain erupted 2,500 years ago and has been the more active of the three.

Now you're talkin' taste.

Crash deaths blamed on language

VANCOUVER (CP) — The accident was survivable — and 11 people died.

In part, in the findings of a Transport Canada report released Wednesday by the investigating team, it was death by language barrier in a harbor-to-harbor flight with an estimated time en route of only 20 minutes.

The Coal Harbor crash on Sept. 2, 1978, of an AirWest de Havilland Twin Otter killed nine Japanese tourists and the two British Columbian crew members.

There were two survivors, members of the Japanese tour group flying in from Victoria to Vancouver Harbor when, at an altitude of 53 metres and about 750 metres from the intended landing area, their float aircraft suddenly rolled left and plunged into the water.

According to the findings only one passenger was killed by impact forces. The major killer was drowning, in which in only two instances the likely cause was aspiration after losing consciousness.

The report by the Aircraft Accident Revue Board, an independent body charged with reviewing and approving investigation reports of major aircraft accidents, found that the standard pre-takeoff briefing described in Air-West Airlines Ltd. operations manual was not given in full.

"The actual briefing was given in Japanese, the native tongue of all the passengers, by the tour guide accompanying them, and included only the use of seatbelts and smoking restrictions," the report said.

"Thus the emergency exits were not pointed out nor was reference made to the safety information cards which show the location of the emergency exits.

"A survivor stated that there were several people standing when he left the aircraft. Those passengers who may have been conscious after impact but drowned possibly did not escape because they were unaware of the position of the emergency exits."

The report also said there was nothing the pilot could have done to prevent the crash.

The accident review board found that corrosive cracking of a wing flap tube led to the crash.

Navy (part 1)

The time might well arrive when, as the growing disarmament lobby demands, Canada will stop spending millions of dollars annually on its armed forces. But until that unlikely day, the federal government has given the armed forces a job that is as complex as it is simple — to defend the country. Armament opponents will argue that Canadian defence spending is foolish because there is no defence for a nuclear war. But military personnel and many others argue persuasively that a conventional war that may or may not escalate to include nuclear weaponry cannot be ruled out.

The armed forces' ability to do a job that is costing $4.5 billion a year depends as much on modern, competitive equipment as it does on personnel. Former Defence Minister Allan McKinnon, while Conservative defence critic prior to May 22, 1979, berated the government for starving military spending on new equipment. After the Conservatives formed the government, he authorized a three per cent increase in real terms for the military budget. The proposal died when the Tory budget and government were defeated.

Although the new Liberal government has not yet announced military spending plans, the former Liberal regime had embarked on an equipment upgrading program. It started three years ago with 128 West German Leopard Mark I tanks and 350 general purpose wheeled armored vehicles. Eighteen Aurora long-range aircraft are now being delivered to replace 34 aging Argus aircraft. And a decision has been made to purchase the F-18A highspeed fighter aircraft. The total price-tag on that equipment tops $4 billion.

Even naval personnel agree that spending priorities so far have been correct. But considering the galloping obsolescence of the country's meagre 24-ship fleet, one can appreciate the antique nature of the naval equipment to be replaced.

In 1977, the former Liberal government embarked on a program to replace six of the naval fleet's most elderly vessels. (A proposal to replace 20 ships on a long term building program was rejected.) With an average destroyer age of 17 years, an average ship life expectancy of 25 years, and seven years lead time necessary to design and build a new destroyer, the government had to do something. With the exception of four frigates commissioned in the early 1970s, Canada's fleet was facing extinction.

But the $1.5 billion ship replacement program has been stalled for well over a year. Before the Liberals were defeated last spring the armed forces Maritime Division had selected two finalists from five shipbuilding consortiums and presented them to cabinet. Neither the Liberals nor the Tories moved.

Canada's new Defence Minister Gilles Lamontagne will barely have had time for all the necessary military briefings, but it shouldn't take him long to recognize that if Canada is to maintain a naval presence on both coasts he must soon implement the Liberals' shipbuilding commitment and start developing a long-term replacement program.

Canada's west coast naval fleet consists of four 22-year-old destroyers of the Restigouche class and four 17-year-olds of the Mackenzie class. None will be replaced by the new ships under consideration. And since no other shipbuilding programs are contemplated these vessels could well be in service when they are more than 30 years old. Over the next 10 years they are scheduled to undergo major refit programs to take them from vacuum tube to solid state transistor technology. Although better than nothing, it is a schedule that technologically will only allow the west coast fleet to tread water.

Tomorrow: a look at the lessons that should have been learned in awarding contracts for armed forces equipment.

Nibbling navigation

Remember the expression — an army travels on its stomach. That may be true, but in getting from point A to point B, the army usually follows a road. Three American adventurers are now adding a new twist to the old saying.

Three trans-Atlantic sailors are discarding all the normal navigation equipment — clocks, sextants and electronic gismos in favor of the internal timepiece, the stomach. In determining position on the open ocean it is important to know when it is noon. For these adventurers, that will be the first time their tummies squeal after breakfast.

If this method of navigation caught on, it could plague search and rescue officials. Imagine trying to find a boat that reported its position as 50 miles south by southeast of the growlies.

WALTER STEWART

Tourism wilts with Carter

PLAINS, Ga.— Three years ago, Plains was packed.

Tour buses ran up and down the tree-shaded streets, security guards waved gawkers to keep moving as they jammed up outside the fenced compound that shelters President Jimmy Carter's home, and down on Main St. eager buyers crowded into the Y'All Come Gift Shop, the Peanut Gallery and Hugh Carter's Antique store to carry away tins of boiled peanuts, like the ones Jimmy eats, peanut drinking cups, shaped liked Jimmy's teeth and replicas of the doll ($7.95) like the one the president once gave Amy for Christmas.

There was talk of a string of motels, restaurants and more gift shops to push more junk on the visitors.

Today, Plains drowses in the sun.

Crowds gone

The Y'All Come shop is gone and there were more clerks (three) than tourists (two) in the Peanut Gallery at mid-afternoon. Souvenirs are gathering dust on the shelves of all the stores.

Up at the Visitors Centre (which didn't even exist three years ago) a guide was unable to explain the dearth of callers.

"It do beat all," she said.

However, a teacher from nearby Americus, who had brought his kids over to see the place, had his own explanation. "Carter's a jerk," he said. "Nobody goes out of his way to visit the birthplace of a jerk."

He could have something.

Carter, a well-intentioned, intelligent, hard-working man, whose personal integrity is not in serious question (he has been found to be tricky, but never outright sleazy) is in trouble

If the Republicans were able to put up a less offensive candidate than Ronald Reagan, Carter's defeat this fall would be certain. As it is, the contest is likely to be close, while voters try to work out which of the two men they find less repulsive.

Yet, by some standards, Carter hasn't done all that bad a job.

If the economy is rocky, well, the same is true elsewhere.

If there are social problems, well, they are no worse, and perhaps marginally better than when Carter took office.

No Americans have been slain in war, the nation is not divided — as it was during the Nixon years — and the federal budget is close to balance, for the first time in years.

Abroad, Carter has kept out of the messy entanglements that wounded Presidents Johnston and Nixon, he pushed through the Panama Canal treaty, helped to bring peace (perhaps only temporarily, but peace nonetheless) in the Middle East, and reacted with patience and forebearance to the two issues — the seizure of U.S. hostages in Iran, and the invasion of Afghanistan — that might have plunged the world into an appalling crisis.

For many Americans, that's the whole trouble.

They don't want forebearance, they want muscle.

It is insufferable to this mighty nation to lie prone while its tail is twisted — just as it was insufferable when the same fate was meted out to a declining Britain decades ago.

The editorial pages — even Democratic editorial pages — are full of thunder and lightning. They want the president to do more than he has done so far, and they don't much care what.

Throw out all Iranians. Cut off all trade with the Russians. Blockade Cuba. Send troops to Tehran. Anything.

Although he made a fist at the Iranians on Monday, there is little chance that Carter will take the rash advice he is now being offered.

Over Afghanistan, he took two major steps; one was to cut back on grain shipments to the Soviet Union, and that seems to be hurting both the Russians and American farmers. The other was to attempt a boycott of the Moscow Olympics, and that has been undercut by most of his allies — including a vacillating Canada.

Over Iran, he has at last cut off diplomatic relations, an act that brought rude gestures from Tehran and not much better from his own people.

He might write off the hostages and declare war, as he was invited to do the other day by William F. Buckley, but belligerency at this late date would only alienate the centre of his own party without winning over the Republican hawks, and he knows it.

Domestically, he is not much better fixed.

Every time he launches some action on energy, his legislation is disembowelled by Congress. Every time he mounts an attack on inflation he is lumbered, from left and right, for doing either too much or too little, and the nation continues along a track of higher prices and soaring unemployment.

No wonder the man looks ten years older than he did three years ago.

There is a certain irony in Carter's helplessness today. When he was running for office, churning up and down the country, shaking hands, smiling, praying aloud, spreading love and bunkum with equal generosity, it was clear he wanted, very badly, to be president.

It was never clear why.

What he offered his people was love, a fresh approach, and the chance to work together, as he constantly said, "to restore the American dream."

As to how he would go about the restoration, he was always vague.

In office, he surrounded himself with good ol' boys from Georgia, fiddled with the levers of power, fought with Congress, lost, and retired into the White House, emerging only from time to time to announce smatters of good news.

In domestic affairs, he confined himself to nagging at Congress. In foreign affairs, with the single exception of the Camp David talks on the Middle East, he was content to react — or not — to the sweep of world currents.

Action attempted

In most cases, when he did attempt direct action — on oil prices, for example — it became clear either that he didn't know what he was doing, or couldn't command a consensus behind his proposals.

Other men have conducted reactive presidencies — Calvin Coolidge did, and so did Dwight Eisenhower.

But Carter is not being measured by the standards of Coolidge or Eisenhower. He is being held to his promise of a new salvation by a nation impatient with restraint, inflation, and impotence — impatient, in short, with reality.

He said he could fix things. Americans are saying, well, let him.

But he can't.

World vote

By resolution of the executive, the Victoria Branch of the United Nations Association in Canada, unanimously affirmed support for a world referendum on disarmament as proposed by Operation Dismantle. That the proposal has merit is attested by the fact already ascertained by Operation Dismantle that a resolution in the United Nations General Assembly calling for such a global referendum would receive from 120 to 135 votes in favor or would pass without dissent if the consensus approach were used.

The failure of international conferences to bring about any significant reduction in arms demonstrates political impotence in the face of the ever-growing threat of nuclear war. It has been acknowledged that worldwide mobilization of public opinion is a vital precondition for any real progress at the negotiating table. The absolute folly of increasing armaments when the nations of the world already possess weapons with a global overkill factor of 15 or 20 is patent to all. When the potential for improving the quality of life of the world's peoples with the $400 billion spent on increasing these stockpiles is considered, the folly of continuing such expenditures is unquestionable.

Such vast wasteful expenditure of resources and wealth derived by taxation is made without consultation of those millions who are thereby being deprived of even the chance to decide their own destiny. In view of the recognized danger of annihilation by causes over which they have no control, surely the people of the world have a human right to participate in a meaningful way in a choice that involves the very survival of mankind.

One of the established goals of the United Nations is "general and complete" disarmament. Prime Minister Trudeau in his address to the Special Session on Disarmament recognized the need to cut off resources and money committed to increase in armaments. Canadians in general long for some form of affirmative action — witness the fact that 38 municipalities have endorsed the idea of a global referendum and public bodies such as the Canadian Labor Congress have also done so.

Surely such an idea as a global referendum, with the potential of providing the missing ingredient in the disarmament process, proposed by a Canadian and supported by the Canadian people deserves the support of their government. A great majority of Canadians, as evidenced by a Gallup poll, want their government to propose the world vote on disarmament in the United Nations General Assembly. We therefore urge the government to give this matter earnest consideration. — Bruce A. Barr, secretary, Victoria.

Muck and paradise

The cartoonist in his "rat-like" perceptions must be commended for his grasp of community conceptions, or one might say misconceptions of the so-called "outside world". Is it really popular opinion that Victorians somehow deserve the privilege of a garden paradise, untouched by the "muck and ruin" of humanity?

Victoria is by tradition a fortress city, but is this the answer; the answer for the future? She may be able to secure a tranquil community life, but no city can accomplish this by trying to take the cream of cosmopolitan life without the residue.

It's a package deal — if you want the benefits, the detriments go with it. Perhaps this is what aggrevates us all — by accepting even the seemingly harmless "delicacies" of contemporary urbanization, we are in turn shocked and appalled at the results. "Crime", "Corruption", "Violence" erupt, as if from nowhere. And what is to be done, except point our fingers? But how can we accept gifts from another and yet condemn him? Is not the proper thing to either refuse the gifts, or, take responsibility by accepting them?

This is a contemporary social calamity that is not unique to Victoria, for it exists on an international scale. An extreme example boils presently in Iran, for the Iranians continued to accept gifts, while condemnation was in their hearts. The end result is always conflict and strife. The point of this discussion lies in the term often referred to as "fence-sitting". By turning one's back on both sides of a problem, the problem only intensifies. It makes no sense to point fingers anywhere except at oneself, for that is where the answers lie. — Ted Pokinghorne, Department of Visual Arts, University of Victoria.

Runaway train

Financially, Canada is like a runaway train weaving its way over a track built on a base of economic quicksand. It's like a financial manager who has long forgotten the real meaning of a debit and a credit, the difference between an actual asset and an actual liability and that assets minus your liabilities, really makes your net worth.

The original principal of the capitalist system was: You produced so much marketable goods and in turn they were sold to cover your costs plus a reward for your ingenuity, time and efforts.

Enter the real villain, "economic feudalism", the system under which financial empires are built on speculation, intangibles and artificially created shortages.

Economic feudalism produces absolutely nothing. It can only exist as a parasite when the basic principal of capitalism is strong enough to carry it as a burden. Once the burden of economic feudalism becomes so overwhelming, any national economy will falter — and cause recessions, bankruptcies and deep depressions. — Robert L. Henshaw, #223, 270 Government St.

Defending Darwin

Howard M. Harris' complaint that my article on Darwin distorted the facts relates to my assertion that Darwin viewed himself as the sole author of evolution theory. Darwin would not under any circumstances have claimed to be the original author of the concept of evolution. This concept had been debated by naturalists, especially in France, since the mid-eighteenth century, and the evolutionary ideas of the pre-sophist Greeks were known to the scholars of the time.

To Darwin evolution theory signified his "theory of descent with modification through natural selection." By a circular argument he implied that evolution and natural selection could not exist without one another, thereby creating a confusion that dogs biologists to the present time and fuels the arguments of the creationists. So Darwin regarded himself as the first author of evolution theory.'

It is true, as Mr. Harris points out, that Darwin acknowledged Alfred Russell Wallace as a later independent author of the theory, but since Wallace's correspondence with him came 20 years after his own unpublished seminal essay was written, and since the content of the essay, and the chronology, were well known to independent observers such as Gray, Hooker and Lyell, Darwin was never in any danger of having to step aside in favour of Wallace.

Statements such as "I would rather burn my whole book than that he or any other man should think that I had behaved in a paltry spirit" do not represent a serious intent. Although Darwin was alarmed by Wallace's theories, coming as they did before the publication of "Origin of Species" ("All my originality . . . will be smashed") he finally calmed down and came to refer to "descent by modification" as "my theory."

I do not wish to characterize Darwin as a man of mean spirit, but I suppose that he had "the same failings of prejudice, passion and human frailty" that Mr. Harris imputes to professors.

My respect for Darwin is not diminished by my knowledge of their less than heroic deeds. The point of my article was that mythification, or the construction of symbolic heroes, though a natural process, does not serve objectivity, and it dehumanises its subjects. That Mr. Harris should insist on Darwin without the warts furthers my thesis. — R. G. B. Reid, Biology Department, University of Victoria.

Face own mess

Re: recent articles in the press trying to explain that our economic woes can be cured by blaming them on bad advice by the economists or by thinking up gimmicks are examples of the well known tendency to pass the buck.

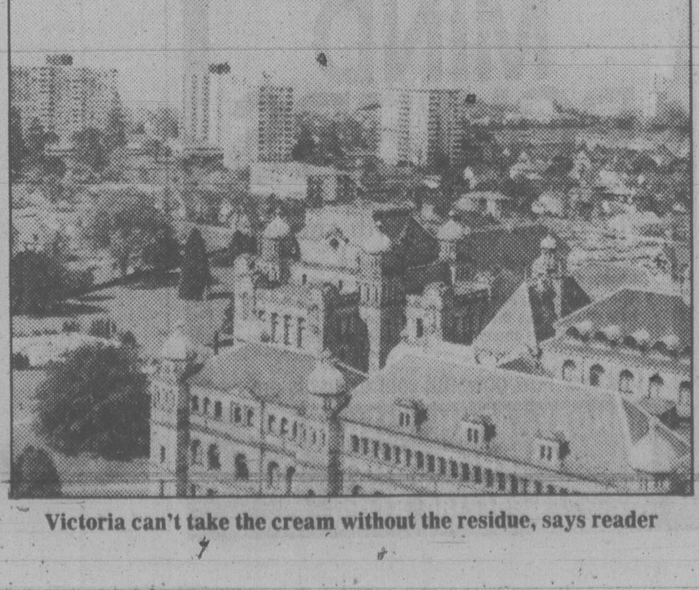
The fact of the matter is that the affluent people of Ontario are not yet prepared to accept the fact that living high on the hog for many years must be followed by a period of fasting to regain health.

It is this refusal that defeated the Conservatives and which will in due course defeat the Liberals, when the fasting is forced on them by the coming deep depression.

The Liberals made a serious tactical error in forcing the Conservative defeat because they will now suffer all the odium of having to clean up their own mess instead of leaving the Conservatives to suffer it. — R. S. Thuillier, 2424 Beach Drive.

Communicate

I would like to know where adults with communicative disorders receive services in Victoria? My family recently moved here from Ontario where Speech-Language Pathology Departments operated within the general hospital settings. They provide services to in-patients and outpatients following a doctor's referral. I was wondering if the board of directors of the local hospitals could communicate with their counterparts in Ontario for more information. — A. Van Lieshout, 519 Kenneth Street.



Victoria can't take the cream without the residue, says reader

Where poverty is a sin

By LINDA BLANDFORD
Manchester Guardian

NEW YORK — In the beginning the elevated railway ran along Columbus Avenue on the upper West Side and steam locomotives clattered deafeningly overhead, spewing soot over the already shadowed street. Since rich folk wouldn't live near railroad tracks, working class families did and as their buildings grew dark, their faces grew wan.

Poverty, said the rich folk, smug in their overstuffed, one-family brownstone dwellings, is a sin. It brings noise, filth and disease and our hearts shall be hardened against those who dwell in it. Thus was the ground laid for WSURA, Amendments 4 and 5, Community Board 7, the Site 30 lawsuit, the J-51 red herring and the latest court battle between low-income families of the United Tenants Association and property owners of Continue.

It is impossible by now to do justice to every nuance of the tale of the West Side Urban Renewal Area, the once-heralded master-plan to reduce the bight of a rotting neighbourhood. Suffice to say that more than $200,000 has so far been raised and spent in legal costs to stop city-funded, low-income housing by the newly-arrived, co-op and brownstone-owning members of Continue — Committee of Neighbors to Insure a Normal Urban Environment.

It should be understood that the very inclusion of the term "normal" is in itself a feat of the imagination; it is so little used in Manhattan these days as to have all the clarity of Middle English. Those nostalgic words "noise and filth" have become familiar again too, while Continue's chairman, quiet, clean-shaven stockbroker Eugene Halpern, is especially keen on the term "middle class" and the image of it fleeing from the said n & f, leaving behind the well-known "wasteland" roamed by low-income "undesirables."

The saga got going in 1970. Some 200 families, evicted by landlords sniffing renaissance and high rents, took refuge in abandoned, city-owned buildings. In time, the city accepted the squatters, set rents, issued leases and, a few months ago, agreed to turn over 12 buildings to the firmly-established United Tenants Association to own and manage.

The UTA was jubilant. Advertisements for responsible superintendents and qualified maintenance men soon appeared in local papers — The Westsider, the Hispanic El Diario, the black Amsterdam News. After 18 years of neglect, rehabilitation was under way. The sound of plasterers and smell of paint was as magic to the UTA and a relief to all West Siders anxious to see these majestic old buildings preserved.

Not, however, to Continue. "The land giveaway to the UTA squatters is the biggest swindle in the history of New York", declared chairman Halpern. (Perhaps this is the moment to point out that many Continue members bought their brownstones from the city 10 years ago for $20,000 and that the current price tops $250,000). Continue went to law — again. The deal, they said, was to be stopped.

Last month, on the morning of this latest hearing, the officers of UTA gathered in the Empire diner on West 86th Street. They were a despondent group. Continue would, as always, be represented by Morris of Demov, Morris, Levin and Schein — name enough in West Side property circles to make any amateur tenants' association shiver. "Eugene Morris," said Father Henry Browne, West Side do-gooder, "would have subdivided the Garden of Eden for profit." UTA had had a lawyer for only 12 hours: the afternoon before the Puerto Rican Legal Defence Fund had called to offer it services.

And here is what stops this from being another gentrification squabble — the size of the stakes involved and the racial implications that everyone tastefully overlooks. For Halpern's middle classes read white, for low-income read Hispanic and black. That is the ugly divide. Do they know, those 4,000 middle-class families belonging to Continue, of the pain inflicted in their names? Of the distress caused by the slurs and innuendoes? And would they care? No, say those who grow up in bitterness.

Perhaps that breakfast group at the Empire diner would have been less gloomy had UTA president Lucila Velez been there. Velez, a spunky, generous woman from the Dominican Republic, was one of the original squatters. She and her three daughters live in a fourth floor apartment on West 88th Street. Her home is crowded but spotless and the front parlor is always immaculate. Outside her barred and locked door the stairs are menacing, the hallway dirty and dangerous. The city cannot give permission for entrance locks until Continue's court case is settled.

But Lucila Velez couldn't be there. Laid off as a teacher's assistant during the fiscal crisis of 1978, she nurses an old man paralysed by a stroke. Her daughter, Ruth, 20, came along in her place. Where the mother is hardy and reconciled to the world, the daughter cannot accept that she and her friends have to go to court to justify their existence.

"I've lived in this neighborhood all my life. Why can't they leave us alone? They say low-income persons are pollutants — don't they realise that we're not all bums, pimps, drunks or garbage? They say we're filth. How can anyone say that about my mother? If you're hungry she'll bring you home and give you something to eat, if you have no place to sleep, she'll give you her bed. She's always worked hard and she'll help anyone. And still sometimes I have to reassure myself that it isn't true what they say, that we're not bad people.

"Members of the UTA are decent people who want a decent home just like them. We want a safe neighborhood too, a safe hallway, a door with a lock downstairs. We get frightened — just like them."

A few months ago, the Velez family was sitting in the kitchen when Ruth heard a strange knocking. It was the sound of flames beating against their walls in empty apartment next door. "Arson," said the fire inspector. "Life," said Lucila Velez. "Our enemies," said her daughter.

Barring door to intruders in fear-ridden 'apartment'

Forgotten people

By DUDLEY CLENDINEN
New York Times

NEW YORK — In a rank and abandoned building of 20 apartments in East Harlem, Amarilys Cruz and Francisco Comas are each other's only neighbors.

In April 1979, when the building was almost full, the city condemned it for lack of heat, hot water and electricity in the halls. The other tenants moved out. Miss Cruz and Comas stayed.

When the rent collector stopped coming by and the water and the lights both failed, when strangers came to prowl and an apartment down the hall burned, when there was nothing any longer to protect them but their own frail alliance, still they stayed.

Ordinarily when the city takes over a building for lack of services — as it does about 500 times a year — it helps tenants find new homes. But for reasons that are not clear, the building's two last tenants and the city's social agencies passed the winter in ignorance of each other. More than half the buildings in the block are condemned or partly empty.

Comas has been in the five-storey building for a generation; Miss Cruz for just a year. He was born in Puerto Rico and came here to find work at the beginning of the Depression. She was raised here and returned from Connecticut and a broken marriage a year ago.

Miss Cruz is 22 and has two children — Yeneil, 3 years of age, and Damien, 1, and there is a kitten, Ocean, whose job is to fight a buildingful of rats.

Comas is 75, with a heart condition and high blood pressure. He is a widower who has not worked full time since he left the kitchen of a Brooklyn department store some 15 years ago.

Comas has no windows in his first-floor apartment, which is twice the size of a large closet. He sleeps in the fetid dark. "Sometimes," he says, "at 4 o'clock in the morning, people from other neighborhoods try to get in."

Miss Cruz has windows in her third-floor apartment. They let in air, but they also allow entrance, and she is afraid. "I am always hearing people up and down," she says.

They have much in common: candles for light, the fire hydrant on the street outside for water and construction bricks placed in the licking flames on the burners of the gas stove, for heat. The gas is siphoned from Consolidated Edison, New York City's utility company.

And there is the utter dark at night and the echoing noises of men who enter the collapsing building to tear out and steal the stoves, without regard to leaking gas. That is the worst of all, they say, the constant fear of fire or explosion from that gas.

Comas lives on Social Security and disability payments, a total of $280 a month. But he is not sophisticated in the ways of bureaucracy, and he assumes that help is a selective thing. "Many people get the money to move," he says. "Many people are important. I am not important, I cannot get the money to move."

Three weeks ago he walked tentatively into the office of the East Harlem Committee on Aging to ask what had happened to the housing application he filed through the Leonard Cavello Senior Citizens Center in April 1979. If he could not find room in some place for the elderly in East Harlem, he said, he was going to sleep in Central Park.

The workers in the committee's office took a long look at frail Comas and put on their coats and went back with him to the building, where he and Miss Cruz and the children live. And then they called Hot Line Cares.

But the city's services are overloaded, the welfare budget is threatened by federal cuts, and priority is relative. It also depends on someone knowing about the need.

How to handle the hogs

Russell Baker

NEW YORK — Periodically I go back to the Southern hills to visit my folks, and we all handle hogs. My friend Luther, who is a New Yorker, went down there with me last time and found this curious.

"I was quite prepared to see people down here handling snakes," said Luther. "But hogs . . ." I explained that snake handlers handled snakes for religious reasons and that hog handling had nothing to do with religion, but was simply an old custom in my part of the hills.

Actually, most of the hogs we handle aren't hogs at all, but only piglets. It takes a well-muscled man to handle a full-grown hog with any aplomb. In fact, you can strain your back and be laid up for a week if somebody hands you one to handle and you're not braced just right to receive it.

In accordance with the custom, Grandmother Ella, as senior member of the family, was the first to do the handling after we all got settled on the porch, and when she finished she offered the hog to our guest.

"Living in New York," Luther said, declining her offer, "doesn't prepare a man to handle hogs."

Grandmother looked at him rather sharply. "You handle landlords, don't you?"

"Well, we try."

"And you handle headwaiters, ticket scalpers, theatrical and literary agents, not to mention parking-garage attendants at Christmas time?"

"That we all do," said Luther.

"Then you ought to be in shape to handle a hog," said Grandmother.

"Isn't it a bit — dirty?" Luther asked.

"Are you kidding?" asked Uncle Fred. "This little pig? It's never even had to sit on a subway, or crawl into the back of one of those taxicabs, or walk down one of those streets where the garbage is swirling all around in the air and then settling down on hide and hair."

Uncle Fred extended the hog for Luther's handling. Nervously, Luther reached into his pocket for a handkerchief to mop his forehead. Uncle Fred withdrew the hog in alarm. "Hands that touch that rag," he said, "will never touch this pig."

Luther looked at his handkerchief and discovered that it was not a handkerchief at all, but a dollar bill he had thrust into his pocket back in Manhattan. Like most dollar bills from Manhattan, it seemed to have been used by gas pumpers to rub grease onto windshields.

Everybody laughed at Luther's consternation, except for the hog, which just looked relieved about his close escape. I showed Luther to the wash basin. He was down in the mouth. "Don't let a little hog handling get you down, Luther," I said. "It's just our way."

"What about hog rights?" he asked. "Has anybody consulted the hog about whether he wishes to be handled? Is the hog entitled to bring your whole family down to the pigpen and let his guests handle the people?"

"Luther," I said, "this is not New York. Do not call the Civil Liberties Union. These people would not understand. They are just trying to be friendly. It is their way. What's more, the hogs don't seem to mind."

"Just trying to be friendly, indeed!" said Luther. "If you ask me, they're nothing but hillbilly chauvinist pig handlers."

"Come back and be a good sport about it, Luther," I urged, "and I will try to get you out of having to eat home-canned garden vegetables and country ham without chemical additives at dinner tomorrow."

★ ★ ★

When we got back to the porch, the hog had been sent away for the evening, and everybody was rocking except Cousin Gwendolyn and her beau, Chilworth, who were dressed up and just leaving. "Are they going to a party?" Luther asked Grandmother Ella.

"Some party," laughed Grandmother. "They're all gathering down to the hollow tonight at the human-sacrifice bar."

"Human sacrifice!" said Luther. "You can't be serious!"

"Oh," said Luther. "In that case . . ."

Grandmother favored me with a wink.

By JUDITH FINLAYSON
The Globe and Mail

More than two million Canadians now live in single-industry towns, instant communities built by private companies to supply resources for particular industries. Life in the towns for many of the workers who fled unemployment lines in more densely populated areas is relatively prosperous, at least in economic terms: boats, snowmobiles, an abundance of "things" characterize lives previously lived at a subsistence level.

But as a recent National Film Board film makes clear, spanking new dinette suites notwithstanding, this is No Life for a Woman. Producer and director Bonnie Kreps filmed in typical single-industry resource towns in British Columbia and her view is bleak. Houses and trailers cramp together assaulting an inhospitable landscape where winter lingers for nine months of the year.

"Remember when I married Bob and I said I'd follow him to the ends of the earth," one wrote home to her mother. "Well, finally, Mum, I'm here."

These women have arrived at the end of the rainbow only to discover that the pot of gold contains equal parts of loneliness and boredom. Family life in the towns is rigidly segregated: the father keeps busy with his job while the mother looks after the home. The housing is usually inadequate, there are few, if any, day care facilities, and public transportation is virtually non-existent. One woman describes a not untypical day in the life:

"When a father works shifts and he has to sleep during the day, mothers have to take young children out of the house. They have nowhere to go. So they end up driving the kids around for hours and hours in their cars."

Women in single industry resource towns must constantly confront a lack of choices that makes them feel powerless and gradually erodes their sense of self-esteem. They can't go out to work because there are no jobs. (In one town 88 applied for four available positions as cashiers.) The only places to congregate are beer parlors which women are discouraged from visiting, unescorted. Also, the population tends to be transient. Said one woman, "I hardly feel like making friends any more. Every time I make one, she moves."

What happens to women who are young and full of energy, but trapped in a house and told they are of no practical use? They slowly begin to slip into a state of depression. Two-thirds of all depressed patients are women. Moreover, as sociologist George W. Brown and psychotherapist Tirril Harris discovered, working class women are four times more likely to develop clinical depression than those from the middle class. Basically, it's because they have fewer options when confronted with too much stress. They feel powerless to effect even the most minor changes in their lives.

Many of the conclusions Brown and Harris documented in their book Social Origins of Depression: A Study of Psychiatric Disorder in Women, are relevant to women in Canada's single-industry resource towns. As they see it, poor housing is one of the key problems. Because women have been conditioned to base their identity on their roles as homemakers, inadequate housing is a daily reminder that they have failed as mothers and wives.

In other words, the problems contributing to psychiatric conditions in women are, to a large extent, social in origin. The core idea of the Brown-Harris study is that the social disintegration of a community is related to its rate of psychiatric disorder. Women in single-industry towns are constantly confronted with the symptoms of social disintegration: few and weak group associations, few patterns of recreation and a weak and fragmented network of communications.

No Life for a Woman, makes the important point that the unhappiness experienced by these women is not of their own making. As one woman in the film said, "I'm not crazy. This is a problem and I'm part of it."

Oil-hungry Japanese turn deaf ear to sanctions call

Times News Services

The United States' call for economic sanctions against Iran over the Tehran hostage crisis looked increasingly like a paper tiger today as Japan indicated it would not risk rocking its oil-supply boat.

Japanese government officials said today Japan already has ruled out the possibility of severing diplomatic ties with Iran, even if the U.S. asks it to do so — one reason being that Japan receives 10 per cent of its oil supply from Iran.

So far no U.S. ally, including Canada, has declared its support for the Iran boycott.

Among the American proposals presented to Japan, according to Japanese foreign ministry sources, are a recall of Japanese Ambassador Tsutomu Wada from Tehran, an export ban and suspension of financial agreements.

Foreign Minister Saburo Okita said Japan will consult with Western European countries before taking any steps to protest against the stalled efforts to release the 53 American hostages now in their six month of captivity in Tehran.

Meanwhile, the nine members of the European Economic Community (EEC) also stopped short of putting teeth into the U.S. sanctions bid.

While the EEC foreign ministers expressed solidarity with the United States and condemned Iranian authorities for the continued detention of the Americans, they stopped short of imposing any economic sanctions against Iran.

EEC sources said West Germany had pressed for a tough EEC stand on the Iran crisis, but the French insisted they would not be pushed into an economic war with Iran because of U.S. troubles.

U.S. President Jimmy Carter today chided U.S. allies who have failed, so far, to back him up in the Iranian crisis.

"Some ask for protection, but are wary of the obligations of alliance," he said:

"Nations ask for leadership; at the same time they demand independence of action. They ask for understanding, yet often decline to understand us in return."

It was reported from Washington today that the U.S. is painting desert camouflage on tanks, artillery pieces, trucks and other military equipment for a force of 10,000 men in preparation for a potential fight in the Indian Ocean area.

Defence officials confirmed the equipment is being conditioned at the Marine Corps Logistic Support Base at Albany, Ga., for movement to the region in early summer.

In other developments, a spokesman for the militants holding the U.S. captives in Tehran said today an attack by neighboring Iraq would leave the American hostages "in grave danger" because "Iraq is a puppet of America."

The new threat came as Iran and Iraq inched closer to full-scale war, with Iran claiming to have beaten off Iraqi air attacks and destroying a military base in fighting along the Moslem nations' common border.

It also quoted a military spokesman as reporting fresh fighting along the frontier near the town of Qasr-e-Shirin and saying that Iranian troops destroyed an Iraqi military base.

Reports in Tehran also claimed units of Iran's regular army fought a 14-hour battle with Iraqi forces Wednesday, in which the Iranians "crushed" Iraqi positions at two border points, Naft-e-Shah and Soumar.

Students stranded

VANCOUVER (CP) — Five Iranian architecture students are stranded in Vancouver until American immigration officials decide whether to revalidate their visas and allow them to return to the University of Idaho at Moscow.

The students were on a field trip to Vancouver to view the works of architect Arthur Erickson when U.S. President Jimmy Carter announced Monday that Iranians were barred from entering the U.S.

A U.S. consulate spokesman said in Vancouver today the students must apply for revalidation of their student visas.

Without valid visas, he said, the students couldn't even return to the U.S. to pick up their belongings, and they would be Canada's problem.

Dividends

HCI Holdings Ltd., 30 cents, plus a special of $1, May 1, record April 16.

Indusmin Ltd., 40 cents, semi-annual, June 30, record June 9.

Mercantile Bank of Canada, 22 cents, May 30, record April 30.

Company reports

Reed Ltd.

Profits of Reed Ltd. Pulp and Paper Group leaped to $44.4 million in 1979, up from $3 million the year before, the company says in its annual report.

The company said it plans to invest $20 million this year in increasing the productivity of its plants and the quality of its products.

Most of the sum is earmarked for modernization of its Quebec City mill, where production of newsprint hit record levels of 1,000 tonnes a day in 1979.

Northwest Sports

In spite of a $400,000 damage award, Northwest Sports Enterprises Ltd. has reported net earnings of $271,879 or 27 cents a share for the six months ended Feb. 29.

The company had a net loss of $21,456 for the corresponding period last year.

Northwest, which owns Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League, said the effect of a B.C. Supreme Court decision which gave more than $400,000 to former Canucks player Mike Robitaille amounts to $215,095.

Revenues increased to $6,093,225 from $5,367,715, mainly because of increased television broadcasting fees for Canucks games and an additional exhibition game.

Corby Ltd.

Corby Distilleries Ltd. has announced that consolidated profit for the six months ended Feb. 29, 1980, advanced to $1.9 million, or 84 cents a share, from $1.5 million, or 67 cents a share, for the same period last year.

Sales rose to $33.7 million from $28.7 million.

The company noted in a statement that profit was affected by favorable exchange rates and increased sales volume, while per share earnings reflected a two-for-one stock split in January.

George Weston

The company said in its annual report the division had an after-tax profit of .43 per cent of sales, or $20,300,000.

Food processing and fisheries contributed $681 million and $337 million, respectively, with return on sales of 1.86 per cent and 1.98 per cent. Weston's forest products division had sales of $354 million and 7.3 per cent profit.

Woodwards

Woodwards Stores Ltd. reports net earnings of $19,400,183 or $2.86 a share for the year ended Jan. 26, compared with $15,269,286 or $2.34 a share for the previous year.

Operating revenue increased by 13.7 per cent to $899,722,669.

Pan-Canadian

Pan-Canadian Petroleum Ltd. had record earnings in 1979 and expects to do even better this year, Bartlett Rombough, the company's new president, announced.

Rombough, in a speech to the company's annual meeting, said gross income was $424 million last year and net income a record $166 million.

Net income for the first quarter of 1980 is estimated at $59 million, a substantial increase over the same period last year.

Newmont

The Similkameen division of Newmont Mines Ltd. has reported profits of $26.6 million for 1979, a dramatic increase over the 1978 figure of $1.17 million.

The increase resulted from improvements in tonnage milled, better ore grade and higher concentrate production, the company said.

Better copper prices, a lower stripping ratio and the exchange rate on the U.S. dollar also contributed to the increased profit.

B of M boosts mortgage rate

MONTREAL (CP) — The Bank of Montreal kept mortgage rates spiralling upward with an announcement that rates on five-year closed mortgages are rising three-quarters of a percentage point to 17.5 per cent and three-year rates are up half a point to 17 per cent.

The new rates take effect immediately. One-year closed mortgages — which cannot be cancelled without penalty before the term is up — rise one-quarter point to 16.5 per cent, and one-year open mortgages, which are cancellable, are up one-quarter to 17 per cent.

The bank said, however, that its customers who are renewing mortgages can get a one-year closed mortgage at a special discount rate of 16 per cent. The Bank of Montreal's prime rate, at which it loans money to top corporate borrowers, rose last week to 17.25 per cent.

In another announcement, the bank said interest is going up on registered home ownership savings plans and registered retirement savings plans. In both cases depositors will get 13.25 per cent, up from 12.5.

Rates on term deposits of $5,000 or more also go up, effective today. The increases on terms of less than 180 days are one percentage point, with smaller increases for longer terms. The highest rate is 15 per cent, on terms of 90 to 179 days.

Appealing appeal

The B.C. government will appeal a B.C. Supreme Court judgment that says the provincial cabinet cannot rule on appeals of its own legislation.

Bob Edwards, a lawyer with the attorney-general's ministry, said he has been instructed to participate in an appeal against the court's decision last month that cabinet does not have the authority to overturn orders made by the pollution control branch.

The case arose when the cabinet upheld the Capital Regional District's application to build a sewage outfall in nearby Esquimalt, despite rejection of that request by the PCB.

Pollution control officials turned down the application on grounds it would pollute local waters and beaches.

The B.C. government cannot appeal directly but will be intervening on behalf of the CRD.

After the supreme court ruling March 21 there was concern within the attorney-general's department that the judgment, if allowed to stand, would set a precedent affecting about 60 other provincial statutes.

However, further examination has shown that only three pieces of legislation are involved, Edwards said.

One of these — the Coal Act — is of marginal concern to the government. Edwards said attention is focused instead on cabinet's continued ability to countermand administrative decisions made under the Water Act and Pollution Control Act.

The instant wave of opposition to the waterfront convention centre looks at first like your average rent-a-crowd. The critics haven't much to criticize when they attack the choice of the Wharf Street site or the design of the building.

The old Reid property on Wharf Street has been mooted for a convention centre for a year and a half. It's a bit late for second-thoughts now.

And those who want the three acres reserved for a park are getting greedy. They need a reminder of what the Inner Harbor was like only 10 years ago, when blight and ugliness prevailed.

Today Ship Point and the Black Ball wharf are a public promenade. Wharf Street has been revived with new commercial projects. New harborside developments must include space at water's edge for a public walkway.

A park on the Reid site would close at sunset. The trade centre is going to be an attraction after dark, and not just for visiting convention delegates and their spouses. There will be home shows, boat shows and cultural events aimed at local residents as often as there will be conventions for outsiders.

There's no accounting for taste, either. I think the design by Paul Merrick is a fine one. The architects on the city's advisory design panel also liked it, with some minor reservations about details.

It respects the site, harmonizes with its surroundings and provides plenty of public space. The design is one-quarter the density the centre could be under existing zoning.

The marina there now will remain and you'll be able to drive your car right down to water's edge through the convention centre parkade. How much more accessible to the public can it be?

★ ★ ★

But critics like Peter Pollen and Ald. Robin Blencoe are on target with their attacks on the quiet, cozy way the centre has been planned.

In effect, the province and the city are paying for an $8 million plaything for a small group of downtown businessmen. They'll make all the key decisions about operating the centre while the city and the province pick up the inevitable losses.

Some people are criticizing Blencoe for what seems to be a very recent awakening, but there hasn't been any time in the past when city council could raise these questions and get some answers for the taxpayers who will be footing the bill.

The central problem is the secretive nature of the Provincial Capital Commission. It refuses to do business in public. The convention centre has been planned in secret and sprung on the public as a fait accompli.

You can't plan by committee, of course, but it would be nice to be informed once in a while of what's going on. A cocktail party at The Empress in November with half a dozen rough sketches and a presentation of a scale model to council last week do not suffice.

Blencoe's description at his press conference Wednesday is a bit melodramatic — "giving a public building built with public funds to a very powerful downtown business clique" — but that's what is happening. With their token two representatives each on the board of directors, the city and the province won't have much say about it.

The Pan-Pacific group and the capital commission have gone their quiet way, even as far as setting a prospective budget for the centre and setting a salary for the general manager of the centre ($40,000 to $45,000). But who else but the businessmen and bureaucrats has been kept informed?

Council is in the dark, although it has committed up to $200,000 a year to pay operating costs and build a $1.7 million parkade.

Mayor Bill Tindall and Ald. Bill McElroy are members of the PCC, but the information they have conveyed to their council colleagues and the public about the centre could be written on a matchbook.

Pollen and Blencoe ought to scream and shout until there are some satisfactory replies to questions about the whole management plan for the trade centre. It should be viewed with suspicion until the PCC or the Pan-Pacific Trade and Conference Centre Society provides evidence to the contrary.

★ ★ ★

Regarding last week's column on aldermanic salaries, Ald. McElroy makes $10,800 a year as part-time manager of the Marigold housing co-op, not $20,000 as reported. He started the job at that rate but remained full-time for only three months.

Fill 'er up . . . with NG

By AL FORREST

The natural gas car.

If it works it will solve overnight Canada's oil deficit problem and will cut in half the price of automobile fuel.

Dr. Bob Stewart, chief executive officer for Science Minister Pat McGeer, says he's optimistic the natural gas car will be a success.

It's exactly what Canada needs, Stewart said, because the country has a surplus of natural gas but a deficit in oil.

And B.C. is the most obvious place to start because we export natural gas but must import oil from Alberta.

A three-month experiment was announced Wednesday by McGeer.

Stewart said the experiments will be conducted at the B.C. Science Research Centre at the University of B.C. and at B.C. Hydro's yard in Burnaby.

But successful experiments have already been conducted in Calgary, the U.S. and New Zealand.

It would have a special tank, like one used by a scuba diver, installed in the trunk of the car, or behind the rear seat.

It would be connected with pipes to the motor.

It would be filled with compressed natural gas, to a pressure of 2,000 pounds per square inch but would be as safe as any gasoline system.

Service stations eventually would have NG pumps to fill these tanks, using high pressure hoses.

The driver could use either regular gasoline or NG.

He could push in a lever on the dashboard for NG or pull out for gasoline.

"It's that simple," Stewart said.

"It could be done while the car is in motion."

Cars would not run on NG alone, at first, because there would not be enough outlets.

To be sure of fuel, the cars would use both fuels.

The cost?

But if the local experiments are successful, a B.C. manufacturing plant would make the tanks, reducing the cost per car to about $750.

"In two or three years the equipment would have paid for itself."

The NG tanks would hold about the equivalent of seven gallons of gasoline, or enough to drive 150 kilometres.

"A lot of decisions are still to be made but we are studying the idea of having major service station outlets handle the natural gas. It seems to be the best way to go on this."

NG compression plants will be established in the Vancouver area when the need becomes evident.

Stewart said NG is not a new idea for cars.

"The idea originated in the 1960s when people were concerned about pollution. As it turned out few people were interested in spending extra money to preserve the air. But now they are interested because it will save them money."

Cars have been driven a total of 18 million kilometres on NG since the U.S. began experiments with it.

To be economically feasible, there would have to be some tax concessions from Ottawa.

But Stewart is optimistic the federal government will co-operate.

"It would solve Canada's dependency on foreign oil suppliers. Ottawa should be interested in that."

A car would get better mileage from NG, about the equivalent of up to 20 per cent more.

The cars would not get quite the acceleration, however, because they are designed specifically for gasoline.

This power loss would be minimal, Stewart said.

Eventually cars might be manufactured specifically for NG, which would make them more efficient.

Many of the trucks at Canadian Western Natural Gas in Calgary have been using dual-fuel systems since 1971.

Gene Zadvorny, public relations manager for the utility, told the Times today as many as 120 vehicles in the fleet had been converted to dual-fuel systems in past years, but now only 50 are using both types of fuel.

But the reduction was only because the company was reasessing its needs under the ever-changing energy crisis.

The utility services 108 Alberta communities and 230,000 customers.

Zadvorny said that while there were many benefits to natural gas usage, there were problems with compressors and storage.

The problems, he feels, will soon be overcome.

All the available data the company had gathered was given to McGeer's ministry, as well as to other provincial governments, the American Gas Association and the U.S. government.

Applying road taxes to natural gas consumption was one of the economic problems Zadvorny foresees for NG as an automotive fuel.

Zadvorny estimated the power loss of switching to natural gas from gasoline at about 10 per cent.

"That isn't very much. We found the individual driver can adjust very easily."

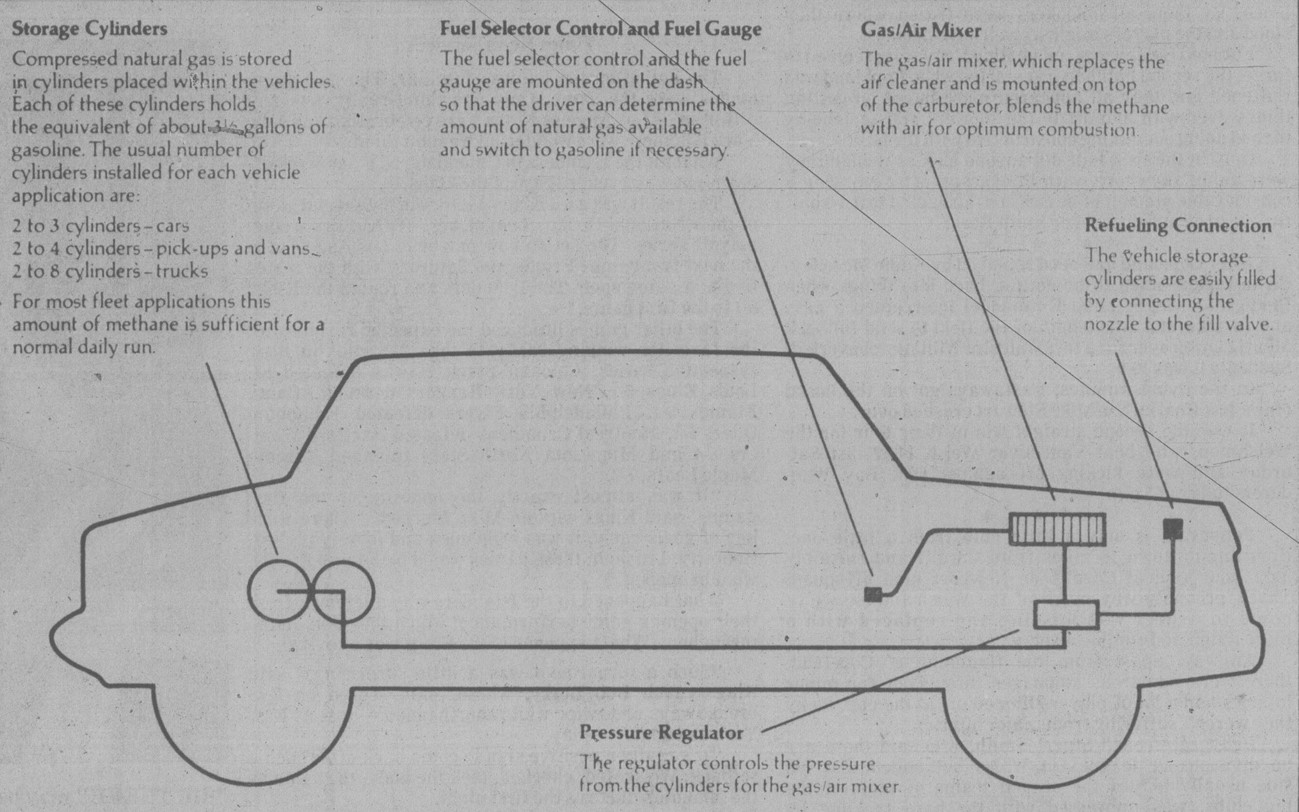
To illustrate the cleanliness of natural gas usage, Zadvorny pointed to the NG-powered truck that carried cameras filming runners at the Pan-American Games in Edmonton.

"The runners wouldn't run behind a conventional truck, but there was no problem with NG."

Zadvorny recalled that California utility trucks have been operating on natural gas for years.

Here's how the system works

A simple one day conversion permits the vehicle to operate on either natural gas or on gasoline by using a dash-mounted selector control. The conversion equipment consists of fuel storage cylinders, a pressure regulator, a gas/air mixer attached to the standard carburetor, and the fuel selector control and fuel gauge. Normally, a simple change in carburetor adaptor allows this system to be transferred to another vehicle for continued use.



Storage Cylinders

Compressed natural gas is stored in cylinders placed within the vehicles. Each of these cylinders holds the equivalent of about 3½ gallons of gasoline. The usual number of cylinders installed for each vehicle application are:

2 to 3 cylinders – cars
2 to 4 cylinders – pick-ups and vans
2 to 8 cylinders – trucks

Fuel Selector Control and Fuel Gauge

The fuel selector control and the fuel gauge are mounted on the dash so that the driver can determine the amount of natural gas available and switch to gasoline if necessary.

Gas/Air Mixer

The gas/air mixer, which replaces the air cleaner and is mounted on top of the carburetor, blends the methane with air for optimum combustion.

Refueling Connection

Pressure Regulator

Maggie offer turned down

The Princess Marguerite will not be sold to anyone who wants to put her back into service.

"The government has made the decision not to run the Princess Marguerite and that means for other people as well," Transportation Minister Alex Fraser said Wednesday.

Premier Bill Bennett agreed: "Yes, that's the government policy."

They were responding to a purchase offer from Pacific Rim Steamship Lines of White Rock, which wants to operate the Marguerite on the Victoria-Seattle run as a privately-owned service.

The response to that offer will be negative, Fraser said. The Marguerite will only be used as a stationary facility, probably as a floating maritime museum in Victoria, as proposed by Bennett.

Pacific Rim, in a letter to the premier, said the Marguerite can be safely put back into service after a refit.

The company offered to buy the ship for $100,000, lease dock space for another $100,000 a year and pay a further 10 per cent of net revenue for an assurance that the province would not get involved in any competing Victoria-Seattle service.

Old glory all the way

The latest addition to the B.C. ferry fleet will travel under the stars and stripes and have an American crew when it goes into service next month between Seattle and Victoria.

And the Canadian Merchant Service Guild is unhappy.

The 250-passenger jetfoil Flying Princess II has been leased for six months to the Flying Princess Transportation Co. of Victoria which is funded by the government-owned B.C. Development Corp.

Guild spokesman Capt. John Bragg said the Americans will be taking jobs normally performed by Canadians aboard the Princess Marguerite which the province has taken off the run and replaced with the smaller Queen of Prince Rupert of the B.C. Ferry Corp. fleet.

The guild, in a telegram to B.C. Transport Minister Alex Fraser, urged that the jetfoil be placed under the Canadian flag and that Boeing be responsible to train a Canadian crew.

However, Boeing says using its own crew is part of the six-month lease.

By PAUL MINVIELLE

A rally Saturday at the legislature to protest high mortgage interest rates has been cancelled.

It was called off after local organizer Ena Curran heard — erroneously, as it turned out — that keynote speaker Viv Woolford, the former Mississauga car salesman spearheading a cross-Canada fight to lower interest rates, apparently was short of funds.

But after Curran put the brakes to her rally plans, Woolford phoned to say he could come after all.

She said she considered carrying on without Woolford but decided it wasn't worth having people turn out to a rally to hear what she's already said publicly.

Curran said several of her supporters, including former Socred MLA and minister of agriculture Cyril Shelford, thought it best to cancel the rally and try to organize one at a later date.

Though the rally here has been wiped out, a similar protest in Vancouver sponsored by a group called the Association to Control Mortgage Rates, will go ahead Sunday.

Curran said she has also decided to forward all the names she has received on petitions directly to the government rather than through any group.

Curran said she is concerned about the political makeup of the the membership of the Vancouver group, particularly Bruce Yorke.

Yorke is a member of the Communist Party who ran twice in Vancouver mayoralty races.

He is also a member of the Committee of Progressive Electors (COPE).

Yorke told the Times the Vancouver rally is going ahead and he expects Woolford to be there.

Other speakers will be COPE member Ald. Harry Rankin, Syd Thompson, president of the Vancouver and District Labor Council, Larry MacHale, president of the Independent Businessman's Assistance Association, and Emil Bjarnason, a Simon Fraser University economics professor whose specialty is inflation and monetary policy.

Yorke said today that Marcel Vienneau, a newly-appointed special adviser to federal Public Works Minister Paul Cosgrove, had phoned to say there would be a general indication in Monday's speech from the throne on the direction the government plans to take on mortgage interest rates.

Yorke said Vienneau told him that Ottawa will send representatives to B.C. to hear presentations before specific legislation is introduced.

"We're convinced the government hasn't made up its mind," Yorke said.

Yorke said his group is asking the government to extend existing mortgages for 18 months, after which it is hoped the economic situation will have settled.

Tates pull triple play

The Tate family of Victoria went from two to five Wednesday night.

Petty Officer John Tate's wife Joanne had triplets at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The first baby — a boy — arrived at 7:27 p.m., to be closely followed by another boy and finally a girl at 7:28 p.m.

The two boys weighed three pounds eight ounces and three pounds nine ounces respectively while the girl, Jennifer, weighed three pounds 15 ounces.

Tate, who serves in the destroyer-escort HMCS Yukon, says he and his wife haven't yet decided what to call the boys.

Mrs. Tate and the babies are in good condition.

Tate says both he and his wife are twins.

"That could have had something to do with it," he said.

The triplets are the first born in Victoria since April 3, 1979, when Mrs. Steve Hliva gave birth to two boys and a girl at Victoria General Hospital.

Unlike the Tates, who knew they could expect triplets, the Hlivas were unaware of the fact until about 10 minutes before the births.

Rugby 'more social' here, says Welsh coach

Why, it was just about enough to give the most ardent fans and even some of the players second thoughts about the game of rugby.

There was the ambulance parked smack in the middle of the field, Castaways scrumhalf Paul Copeland prone amongst the blades of grass and 29 other players hopping around trying to keep warm as a chill wind blew across Carnarvon Park.

What a way to spend Easter Monday!

In all it took some 20 minutes before the medical men could arrive, decide that Copeland had done something dastardly to one of his knees and get him sufficiently bound and bundled up and into the ambulance. By then, all onlookers were frozen where they stood and the players might as well have been.

For both Castaways and visiting Penygraig seemed to forget the second half had just started when Copeland was flattened and they all appeared more intent on getting things over with and off to the showers and socializing than in doing something constructive with the ball.

Only in the first half did anyone look as though they were going anywhere, with Penygraig, after enjoying a considerable amount of possession, struggled to a 4-0 half time lead on atry by hooker Keith Rees.

* * *

After Copeland had been replaced by Eddie McAuley, Castaways seemed to be getting back into things when Penygraig winger Mike Emmanuel intercepted a pass and raced almost the length of the field to send fullback Meurig Owen over for a try. Malcolm Williams converted. Suddenly it was 10-0.

In the dying minutes, Castaways got on the board (for a 10-4 final) when Mike Stewart crashed over.

It was the second straight win of their tour for the Welshmen, who beat Vancouver Welsh 14-12 last Saturday and were kicking off against Oak Bay Wanderers today at 5 p.m.

* * *

Penygraig is only a little club from a little one-time mining town 18 miles from Cardiff and certainly isn't your typical Cardiff or Newport kind of squad. That's probably why much of the Welsh finesse we've come to expect was missing and replaced with a more rough-and-tumble display.

Anyway, apart from the flattening of Copeland, there were numerous stoppages throughout for minor injuries and a lot of players limped off at the end, lucky they weren't suffering from major injuries.

Penygraig coach Stuart Smith, who said there are no divisions or leagues in Wales but added that his side usually played the second teams of most of the big clubs, was impressed with the hard tackling by the Castaways players.

"You seem to have tremendously big men who are also very fast," he explained. "In Wales, if they're big they're portly . . . and not all that athletic!"

"It seems more a social game than what we have in Wales," he insisted. "Oh, rugby is a social game, of course, all round the world and it is back home, too, but it's serious. They really want to win."

Even if they really want to win on the field over here as well, it will be encouraging to some of the Island's leading swillers to know they lead in something.

* * *

FOOTNOTE: Or perhaps it should be KNEENOTE! Maybe they were just trying to get warm again but there was a lot of clapping as they loaded Paul Copeland into the ambulance and a fan said a little unkindly "that's the biggest round of applause Paul's ever got."

The Penygraig boys didn't forget Paul, though, and were up that evening to visit him in the hospital and present him with a club tie. And doctors handed him the advice they would have to operate on his badly twisted knee and the warning there was to be no more contact sport.

And that was a rather sad end for Paul Copeland, who at 36 had already given up the game and had to be talked into coming out of retirement for this season because Castaways didn't have a scrumhalf!

Canada Cup hockey gets official go-ahead

TORONTO (CP) — Hockey Canada has given Al Eagleson the green light to proceed with plans for a Canada Cup hockey tournament to be staged in Canada in September.

Eagleson is to meet with International Ice Hockey Federation members in Goteborg, Sweden, on April 23 to line up a schedule for the tournament which features the best hockey players from six countries.

The tournament, tentatively set for Sept. 10 to Oct. 1, was put in jeopardy with the possible absence of the Soviet Union due to international tensions resulting from the Soviets invading Afghanistan.

Eagleson said he is proceeding with the organization on the understanding the Soviets will participate. However, he expressed some concern about the late start on preparations.

Black cloud hangs over playoff

By ERNIE FEDORUK

A statement by a Victoria player that indicated the Cougars may not try to win a playoff game in Seattle tonight shocked Western Hockey League officials this morning and may result in serious consequences later.

Centre Barry Pedersen, Victoria's leading scorer, was asked after Tuesday's 8-2 victory over Portland Winter Hawks if the Cougars planned "to throw" tonight's game. He replied in the affirmative.

The question and answer was aired late Wednesday night by television KATU of Portland.

The outcome of tonight's Victoria-Seattle game is most important to Portland. Victoria, with a 5-2, won-lost record in the double round-robin semi-final series, already is assured of a berth in the Western Division final. Seattle is 3-4 and Portland 3-5.

If Seattle wins tonight, divison-topping Portland will be eliminated. If Victoria wins, the Hawks and Seattle will have to play off Friday for the right to advance to the final.

Because Seattle finished third, Victoria obviously would prefer to play the Breakers rather than Portland in the best-of-seven final.

Portland general manager Brian Shaw could not be reached this morning but was greatly upset with the televised interview. However, he was reported to have said the televised interview could greatly jeopordize the future of U.S. teams in the major junior league "because the FBI does not look kindly on the throwing of games . . . for any reason."

"I didn't think the guy (interviewer) was serious," said Pederson. "I was being facetious with my answer. I can't remember the exact words, but I think I said 'it was a possibilty,' or something like that."

Commented coach Jack Shupe: "I would hope Barry wasn't serious, if that was his answer."

Meanwhile, in the Eastern Division, Brandon Wheat Kings staved off elimination by upsetting Regina Pats 6-3 in Brandon. Regina and Brandon each have one one game remaining — each in Medicine Hat.

Kings trample Islanders

Times News Services

The action on the ice was familiar. The post-game quotes were the same. Only one thing really was any different — Los Angeles Kings were celebrating and New York Islanders were wondering what hit them.

What hit the Islanders in Uniondale, N.Y., on Wednesday night was a severe case of the blahs.

The result was a 6-3 Kings' victory in the second game of their National Hockey League best-of-five, first-round playoff series. The action now moves to Los Angeles for the next two games Friday and Saturday with the series tied at a game each. The Islanders had routed the Kings 8-1 in the first game.

The other games produced the expected results with the favorites winning easily to take 2-0 leads in their respective series. Chicago Black Hawks defeated St. Louis Blues 5-1, New York Rangers downed Atlanta Flames 5-1, Philadelphia Flyers defeated Edmonton Oilers 5-1, Montreal Canadiens defeated Hartford Whalers 8-4 and Minnesota North Stars thumped Toronto Maple Leafs, 7-2.

"It was almost exactly the opposite of the first game," said Kings captain Mike Murphy. "There were lots of goals early, it was wide open and loosely played. Honestly, I thought these games would be 2-1 or 3-2. Look what happened."

What happened to the Islanders was a letdown from their opening game performance, which they dominated throughout. What happened to the Kings was a revival.

"Such a turnaround was a little surprising," said Kings coach Bob Berry, whose team scored on five breakaways and twice while shorthanded — just as New York had done Tuesday.

"It's really a positive sign to come back after such a setback. We skated, checked, took the body, the same as the Islanders did to us the first night.

"Every one of my guys should be proud. They proved to themselves they can play playoff hockey against a good team."

Islanders coach Al Arbour switched from Billy Smith to Glenn (Chico) Resch in goal and that move backfired, mainly because Resch's team-mates abandoned him.

"It's not Chico's fault," said Arbour, who lifted Resch after one period. "Those four goals he gave came on 1-on-1 breaks. On those, it's 50-50. But I thought he was dwelling on the goals too much."

● Doug Wilson scored two goals and assisted on two to lead Chicago.

Wilson put Chicago ahead to stay with a blistering slapshot from the point, 23 seconds into the game and then set up power-play goals by Ron Sedlbauer and Tom Lysiak.

● Phil Esposito scored his 59th and 60th career playoff goals to carry the Rangers to victory.

Esposito, with 133 points in 122 career playoff games, is the fifth-leading, all-time playoff scorer.

● A pair of goals by Al MacAdam powered Minnesota.

The North Stars, appearing in only their second NHL playoff since 1972, skated to a 4-0 lead in the second period before goals by Terry Martin and Darryl Sittler narrowed the gap to two goals midway through the third period.

"HI, THERE" may be the cordial way to meet, but it is unlikely Pat Price of Edmonton Oilers (left) and Jim Watson of Philadelphia Flyers exchanged any pleasantries when they met head-on during National Hockey League playoff game in City of Brotherly Love, Wednesday. Flyers won 5-1.

Sabres demolish Canucks

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — After one win and three ties against Vancouver in the regular season, Buffalo Sabres' fans were beginning to wonder when the team's firepower would show against the Canucks.

They found out Wednesday as five Buffalo players hit the scoring column and goaltender Bob Sauve stopped 22 Vancouver shots in a 6-0 rout.

It was the first time a Sabres' netminder has recorded a shutout in seven years of playoffs.

"It doesn't really mean anything, but you always think about it," said Sauve, the most efficient goalie in the National Hockey League this season with a 2.36 goals-against average. "Especially when you're up 6-0."

The teams have today off, then continue their Stanley Cup playoff series in Vancouver, Friday.

Richard Martin scored two goals. His second was a thing of beauty. He banked the puck off the boards to beat John Hughes and he deked Vancouver's other defenceman, Kevin McCarthy, with a left-right fake before firing the puck past goaltender Glen Hanlon.

The Canucks began the game trying to intimidate Buffalo, but the strategy backfired when they were called for what became 23 infractions and 74 penalty minutes in the game. The Sabres were able to convert three of five power plays.

"We've got to be more selective between being abrasive and taking penalties," said Neale.

Tonight in sports

Under-16 soccer exhibition matches at 5 will pit Edmonton Black Gold against Lower Island Selects at Carnarvon Park and Gordon Head Cosmos against Spokane at Lambrick Park.

An international high school rugby exhibition is scheduled for 6:30 with Penglais of Wales facing Mt. Douglas Mountainmen at Royal Athletic Park.

Henderson Realty and Cuckoo Clock clash in the third and deciding game of the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League playoff final at 7:30 in Central Junior High School.

How baseball heroes are made

Times News Services

Two pitchers who had no idea they were to be heroes, let alone play, were just that Wednesday as the Major League baseball season opened.

Dave Heaverlo of Seattle Mariners wasn't even with Seattle until Wednesday morning.

Yet he picked up a save in Seattle Mariners' 8-6 American League sason-opening victory over Toronto Blue Jays.

In Cincinnati, Frank Pastore was called on to start for the Reds when Tom Seaver came down with the flu.

And the hard-throwing young pitcher came through by shutting out Atlanta Braves 9-0 on a three-hitter.

Early Wednesday morning, Heaverlo received what he considered terrific news: he no longer was with Charlie Finley's outfit. Finley had placed Heaverlo on waivers and the Mariners had claimed him.

"I told the people who picked me up at the airport to hurry up and get me to the ballpark," said Heaverlo.

That he did as Seattle manager Darrell Johnson, looking to protect a two-run lead, summoned Heaverlo in the eighth inning and he got the last four outs. His save made a winner out of Mike Parrott who went 6 1-3 before being relieved by Byron McLaughlin.

Freestyle skiing gaining more status

By STEWART LANG

Sometime, in the not-too-distant future, freestyle skiing might be added to alpine and nordic events in the Olympic Games.

The first step was taken last year at Nice, France, when the International Ski Federation (FIS) voted unanimously to take the freestyle discipline under its umbrella.

During the 1980-81 season an international World Cup amateur freestyle circuit will be sanctioned by FIS.

Until now, the World Cup for freestylers has been a professional event.

John Johnston of Ottawa, a former Canadian champion and chairman of the FIS freestyle committee currently developing rules and regulations for international competitions, was in Victoria on Wednesday en route to the Shell Cup national championships starting Friday at Mt. Washington near Courtenay.

He explained that the committee was now trying to get freestyle professionals re-established as amateurs under the Canadian Ski Association.

"In the future, the Shell Cup will be a qualifying competition for the World Cup circuit during the following year," said Johnston.

"The level of competition has been improving each year."

Murray Cluff, a 19-year-old from Medicine Hat and a former Shell Cup champion, graduated to professional ranks and won the recent World Cup event at Whistler Mountain.

Similar moves to organize freestyle skiing are underway in the United States and Europe, where a recent event drew 15,000 spectators. It is also becoming a drawing card in Japan.

In contrast to the World Cup alpine setup, all three events in freestyle — moguls, ballet and aerial — are weighted equally in determining the over-all champion.

The mogul competition involves judging variety of turns, air taken during the run, speed, control, fall-line skiing, body position and aggressivness, on the steepest and most heavily mogulled (bumpy) run available.

Ballet, in which each competitor executes a series of dance steps, spins and turns on skis — often mixed with jumps — is choreographed to music and run on a smooth intermediate slope.

Perhaps the most spectacular event is the aerials, which involve acrobatic jumps that take competitors at one point to as high as 15 metres above the ground.

Competitors from across Canada were scheduled to practice today at Mt. Washington.

The mogul and ballet competitions will run from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Friday and Saturday, respectively. Aerials will be held between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Sunday, followed by the awards ceremony.

Bucks take turn in overtime

Times News Services

Rookie guard Sidney Moncrief came off the bench to score all six of Milwaukee's overtime points Wednesday night as the Bucks held off Seattle SuperSonics 114-112 to even their best-of-seven National Basketball Association playoff series at one game apiece.

Moncrief finished with 16 points. It was the second straight overtime game, the Sonics winning the first 114-113 on a desperation shot by Dennis Johnson with one second to play.

Milwaukee guard Brian Winters topped all scorers with 28 points. Lonnie Shelton paced the 'Sonics with 25. Series resumes in Milwaukee, Friday.

Trailing by 13 points early in the fourth quarter, Seattle rallied behind the outside shooting of guard Fred Brown to force extra time.

Darryl Dawkins, the big, tough centre for Philadelphia '76ers, scored 11 of his 22 points in the final period to lift the '76ers to a 99-92 victory over the Atlanta Hawks and a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven Eastern Conference semi-final.

In other games, Boston Celtics defeated Houston Rockets 119-101 and Los Angeles Lakers beat Phoenix Suns 131-128 in overtime.

Dan Roundfield led Atlanta with 23 points.

Dave Cowens and Chris Ford combined for 26 second-half points to power Boston past Houston in the opening game of their playoff series. Ford finished with 19 points and Cowens had 17. Moses Malone led the Rockets with 27 points and Calvin Murphy added 23.

Norm Nixon scored three points in the final 20 seconds of overtime to give Los Angeles its victory over Phoenix and a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven series.

Magic Johnson's two free throws with 29 seconds left in regulation time tied the game at 120.

Somner joins Legion staff as juniors prep for season

Training is already under way for Esquimalt Legion, Victoria's Junior "A" lacrosse club and for the first time this year there will be four pre-season exhibition games.

First up will be a game against Richmond Roadrunners at Esquimalt Arena at 2 p.m. on Sunday, April 20. The Legion then meets the Victoria Shamrocks, also at the Esquimalt Arena, at 8 p.m. on Tuesday, April 22 and on the following Sunday, April 27, plays Coquitlam J-Hawks at 2 p.m. at Panorama Arena in Sidney.

Last of the pre-season exhibition games will be against the Senior "B" All Stars at 8 p.m. on Tuesday, April 29, at Esquimalt Arena.

All regular season home games will be played at Esquimalt Arena at 8 p.m. on Tuesday nights starting with the league opener on May 6 when the Legion takes on Richmond.

The club has 10 holdovers from last season — Brian Bell, Mike Game, Rhys Wicks, Terry Jay, Ed Van Dyk, Dave Angrove, Kelly Bryant, Russ Kennedy, Bruce Alexander and Ken Murray — but both goalkeepers Mike Duch and Bill Thomas have graduated and no already there are five players bidding to replace them.

Well-known Shamrock star Dennis Somner has retired from playing and will be the Legion's assistant to coach Ken Alexander. Manager is Bob Reid.

Strikers top Cosmos

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Teofilo Cubillas scored three goals and added an assist to lead Fort Lauderdale Strikers to a 4-1 victory over New York Cosmos in the only North American Soccer League game Wednesday night.

Bellusci traded to Adanacs

COQUITLAM — In an effort to get a little more offensive power, Coquitlam Adanacs have completed a deal with Vancouver Burrards to gain the services of Rico Bellusci.

Adanacs, who lost to Victoria Shamrocks in last season's Western Lacrosse Association final, collected Bellusci in exchange for their first choice in the 1981 draft of graduating juniors.

Bellusci was picked up by Victoria McDonalds when they won the Minto Cup national title in 1976.

Time to move on: Brooks

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Herb Brooks severed his ties with the University of Minnesota Wednesday, making a "public thank you" to the state and then saying it was time to move on to other challenges.

Since guiding the U.S. Olympic hockey team to the gold medal in Lake Placid, N.Y., two months ago, Brooks has been keeping a whirlwind schedule which has included numerous public appearances, talks with National Hockey League clubs about possible coaching offers and a trip to Switzerland.

"I dreaded this moment," said Brooks, who won three national championships in seven years at Minnesota before taking a leave of absence to coach the Olympic team.

"This is a year of emotions built up," he said. "But now I'm looking for work, a new career. One pro scout said he thought I was crazy for burning my bridges here at the university. . . .

"But I'm kind of a risk-taker. I've got to push myself. That's my chemistry, I guess."

The Masters: a starry field

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus' comeback has not been confirmed and Tom Watson's game — by his own admission — is short of its peak, making the 44th Masters a wide-open golf tournament with a host of potential winners.

"I'm looking for just a little added confidence," Watson said after a practice round over the 7,040-yard, par-72 Augusta National Golf Club course, site of the first of the season's major international tests of golfing greatness, which begins today.

"I'd like to be going in with a little bit more confidence, something to turn the ignition on so to speak; something to keep me from fighting the golf swing so much, something to keep me from fighting the golf course too much."

Watson currently ranks as the premier performer in golf. He has scored an unprecedented three-year sweep of the Vardon Trophy, leading money-winning honors and Player of the Year.

He has won twice this season and leads the money-winning list. Over the last three seasons, he has averaged a remarkable $17,000 in winnings per start.

He is, simply, the world's No.1.

It is a position he wrested from Nicklaus, considered by most observers as the greatest ever to play the game. He is a five-time Masters champion and winner of a record 15 major professional championships.

But Nicklaus has slipped the last couple of seasons. He says his interest waned. Some faults crept into his swing. And he paid the price. He has gone 21 months without a victory in the United States.

But this season, at age 40, he has come out on the tour with renewed enthusiasm, a rekindled desire, the single-minded determination that has made him a star. He is working harder than ever.

With Nicklaus a question mark and Watson uncertain of his game, a dozen legitimate contenders eye the coveted green jacket

"I have a desire to play golf, to excel," he said. "I'm working on my short game. I'm working on my swing. I have things to accomplish, things I want to do. Golf is fun again."

But his comeback, thus far, has not produced the victory he needs for confirmation. He has played well. He has had opportunities to win three times this season. He reached a playoff at Doral.

But he has not won.

"The Masters, as it always has been, is my first major goal of the year," he said. "This is the one I've been pointing for, the one I've been working for."

But with Nicklaus a question mark and Watson uncertain of the status of his game, the way is open for at least a dozen legitimate contenders for the famous green jacket that goes to the winner.

Among them are:

— George Burns, a long hitter who won in California early this year and tied for second in his last start.

— Andy Bean, who challenged for the Greensboro Open title last week and has the awesome length off the tee many consider necessary to subdue Augusta National.

— Defending champion Fuzzy Zoeller, whose game is at its peak.

— Ray Floyd, a playoff winner over Nicklaus a month ago, who is playing some of the best golf of his life.

— Johnny Miller, who broke a three-year victory drought earlier this year and now appears to be regaining the form that once made him the game's Golden Boy.

— Jerry Pate, a former U.S. Open titleholder with unlimited potential who has finished second in his last two starts.

— Hale Irwin, the current American national champion, one of golf's most intense competitors who has played well recently and seems to save his best efforts for the game's most difficult courses.

— Ben Crenshaw, close to fulfilling the greatness promised by his early career, who has come close often but still lacks the major title.

— South African Gary Player, a three-time Masters winner seeking to become the first golfer to win major championships in four decades.

Those are the major contenders in the field of 91 of the world's finest golfers. But any survey of potential winners also must include Tom Weiskopf, a four-time runner-up in the Masters, proven champions Hubert Green, Lanny Wadkins, John Mahaffey and Australian David Graham, Craig Stadler, a two-time winner this year and, Lee Trevino.

The talented Trevino, who won the Tournament Players Championship in one of the great finishes in the game's history, still is seeking to overcome his personal jinx on the rolling hills that have caused him so much golfing grief.

He once refused to play here.

Now, however, he eagerly seeks this title despite his continued reservations. It's the one he needs to join Nicklaus, Player, Ben Hogan and Gene Sarazen as the only players to score career sweeps of the Big Four titles.

Once-proud Sunderland on road back

LONDON (AP) — Three soccer teams — Sunderland, Birmingham and Chelsea — are level on points in the race for promotion to the English League First Division.

Leicester is one point behind and Luton two points behind the leaders in the closest finish in the Second Division for years.

But as the season goes into the last weeks, Sunderland is the favorite for promotion.

Sunderland crowned a golden Easter with its third straight win Tuesday — a 2-1 away triumph over Shrewsbury.

In its time, Sunderland has been one of England's most famous teams, but through most of the 1970s it has been in the Second Division.

Last season the club appeared set for promotion, but slipped in the last two games and missed the chance. This season it has been fairly steady.

Saturday, Sunderland has a home game against Orient and a good chance to consolidate its lead. Two of its closest rivals, Birmingham and Leicester, clash at Leicester. Chelsea is away to Preston.

In the First Division, Liverpool, with a 3-0 win over Derby on Wednesday, opened up a four-point lead over Manchester United, each with five games to play, and appears heading towards its second straight English League title.

The question now is whether Liverpool can pull off the rare English League and Cup double.

Liverpool faces Arsenal in the Cup semi-finals Saturday. Everton plays Second Division West Ham in the other semi-final.

While Liverpool is busy in the semi-finals, Manchester United will be at home to Tottenham Hotspur in the league. It could be Manchester's last chance of the league title.

Under fire by prexy, Cherry stands on record

DENVER (AP) — Don Cherry, coach of Colorado Rockies, says he is bewildered at reports that the National Hockey League club is thinking about firing him.

Armand Pohan, president of the Rockies, said Tuesday that the club might dismiss both Cherry and general manager Ray Miron.

Cherry apparently knew nothing of the possibility until reporters called him.

"I don't know what to say," Cherry said. "I'm very surprised.

"I'm a little bewildered right now. I don't understand it.

"I stand on my record the last couple of years. It speaks for itself. In seven years it's five wins (first places), a third and a second until this year, and coach of the year three times.

"Now all of a sudden I'm dummy of the year? I'll match my record with anybody in the National Hockey League . . . If they don't want me here, then 'c'est la vie,' 'toodaloo' and all that."

The Rockies, despite the signing of Cherry and numerous player acquisitions, compiled the worst record in the NHL this season for the second straight year.

"I'm just scratching my head and wondering why we ended up 21st out of 21 — and 17th (out of 17) last year," Pohan said from his New Jersey office.

"I'm very disappointed with the result of the season. If I told you anything else, I'd be kidding you."

CRD pressured to stop illegal raw sewage outfalls

Environment Minister Stephen Rogers has confirmed the Capital Regional District is spewing raw sewage into the sea from two major outfalls that have no pollution control permits — Finnerty Cove and McMicking Point.

"They are dumping illegally and they know they're dumping illegally," the minister said Wednesday.

But Rogers feels there is little he can do to stop it.

"If I ordered the outfalls shut, all the sewage would come back up to their toilets," he said.

"We are putting as much pressure on the CRD as we can, to get on with the job of coming up with a solution to the problem."

He refused to set a deadline for a solution.

"We've told them it's a rush," was as far as he would go.

He also indicated legal action against the CRD is unlikely.

"In the past we haven't taken legal action against the municipalities. We don't rule that out in the future but it's not part of our current program."

Victoria NDP MLA Gordon Hanson says the two unlicenced outfalls between them discharge 3.5 million gallons of raw sewage daily.

NDP environment critic Bob Skelly, meanwhile, charged that lack of ministerial backbone has made the Pollution Control Board almost entirely ineffective.

"We generally have weak or incompetent ministers. What's needed is a stronger political resolve to enforce the environmental statutes."

Skelly also puts more blame on the provincial government than on the municipalities.

"You can't set up a regulatory function and then not provide a municipal government with the finances to adhere to the regulations," he said.

"Regulate them. Insist the waters around municipalities be kept clean, that the land be kept productive, that the air be kept pure. But give them the money to do the job."

Prince George civic workers accept pact

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Inside and outside civic workers voted 82 per cent Tuesday to accept a new two-year contract.

The contract provides wage increases of 12.5 per cent in the first year and 90 cents an hour in the second year with a cost of living clause to take effect Jan. 1, 1981.

The 500 workers are members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees. Previous contract expired Dec. 31. Base rates for inside workers ranged from $810 to $2,004 a month and $7.38 to $10.14 an hour for outside workers.

Wash. ferry workers fined, sent to jail

Two top officials of the union representing striking Washington state ferry workers were fined and sentenced to jail Wednesday for refusing to comply with a back-to-work order.

"I will continue to hold that public employees do not have the right to strike," Superior Court Judge T. Patrick Corbett said in sentencing Don Liddle, national president of the union, and Gary Miner, secretary-treasurer.

Liddle said later that he planned to consult with other union officials on their next course of action and refused to say whether they would urge compliance with the back-to-work order and an end to the strike.

The men were fined $300 each and sentenced to remain in jail as long as the strike lasts. The order was stayed until today when the men are to report to King County jail.

In addition, the union was fined $300 for contempt and $30,000 for losses suffered by the state ferry system, the largest in the United States.

The contract dispute has left about 33,000 waterborne commuters struggling to find other transportation, mostly on tour boats pressed into emergency service.

Before the judge

A 20-year-old man was given a two-years-less-a-day jail sentence Wednesday for a March 27 jewelry store smash-and-grab.

Gregory William Hibbert, 74 Dallas, pleaded guilty in provincial court to the breaking and entering count and a Feb. 16 impaired driving charge.

Crown counsel Don Laughton told Judge Blake Allan the silent alarm at the Stadacona Jewelery Shoppe, 1516 Fort, was tripped about 2 a.m. and a citizen saw Hibbert break a window and reach inside. Victoria and Oak Bay police responded and searched the area. Oak Bay officers found Hibbert walking along the 1400-block Fort. He told police he was out for a walk.

Police located a ratchet nearby and took Hibbert to headquarters where they found $447 in rings and other jewelry in his possession. Laughton said another $1,416 worth of jewelry is still not recovered.

Hibbert had convictions on March 7, 1977, for possession of an offensive weapon and breaking and entering. He also was convicted of breach of probation on April 28, 1977, and March 16, 1978.

On Feb. 21, 1979, Hibbert was convicted of breaking and entering and given a suspended sentence and two years probation.

Defence lawyer Robert Salmond said Hibbert had a history of drug abuse centred on the drug MDA but had the problem under control. Salmond said his client was depressed over a problem with a girlfriend the night of March 26, which led to him being quite intoxicated at the time of the incident. He noted that Hibbert cooperated with police and took them to where he hid a jewelry box.

"He's lucky I don't send him to the penitentiary," the judge commented.

Allan imposed a concurrent, 30-day term on the impaired driving count.

In addition, he placed Hibbert on two years probation on the break-in charge and ordered him to make $1,616 restitution to the jewelry shop within six months of his release.

The search was conducted at 9 a.m. Saturday by officers who executed a search warrant. Kostenchuk was found with less than one gram of cocaine in his wallet, Jones stated.

Defence lawyer Felix Reuben described his client as a straight "A" student at the Southern Alberta Institute of Technology in Calgary who was "in the wrong place at the wrong time."

Ronald Lauzon, 25, of 1175 Hampshire, was fined $100 and ordered to perform 100 hours of community service work for ripping a lamppost from its mounting March 30.

Lauzon pleaded guilty to theft under $200 and Laughton withdrew a charge of mischief causing wilful damage.

Laughton said Oak Bay police stopped Lauzon on Oak Bay Avenue about 2:30 a.m. because he was carrying a lamppost. A subsequent investigation showed it had been forcibly removed from a residence in the 1800-block Oak Bay.

Lauzon said he was drunk and admitted having a drinking problem.

Fined $300 for having the care and control of a vehicle while impaired by alcohol was Cornelius Voorwinde, 24, of 1331 May. Voorwinde also was ordered to perform 80 hours community work.

A prior engagement

Kathryn Ellison was selected Tuesday as a juror in the trial of 23 men accused of bringing 33 tons of marijuana into Canada last year.

But it was not until the next day that she told Judge Montague Drake she is getting married in early June and arrangements had been made.

He said that was good enough reason to be discharged from the jury and he turned to the battery of half a dozen defence lawyers to see if there was an objection.

William Deverell said not only was there no objection, but he offered his congratulations.

Jury selection was completed just after 4 p.m. and took the best part of two days, a record in Victoria. The defence used 258 of its 276 challenges and the prosecution stood aside 18 of its entitlement of 48.

The trial was adjourned to 10 a.m. today when Crown counsel Gordon Macdonald was expected to make his opening remarks.

The men, 15 Colombians, seven Americans and a Costa Rican, are accused of importing marijuana between April 1 and May 23, 1979, and possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking on May 22, 1979.

They were arrested after a combined armed forces-RCMP swoop at Sydney Inlet, 50 kilometres northwest of Tofino.

Huge B.C. gas find tapped

VANCOUVER (CP) — A natural gas discovery in northeastern British Columbia could herald a reservoir of up to 40 trillion cubic feet, which would put the province in the same league as Alberta in natural gas reserves.

The well, drilled by Canadian Hunter Exploration Ltd., flowed natural gas at a rate of 19.3 million cubic feet a day when tested recently. The discovery well is a wildcat drilled 25 kilometres west of the Alberta boundary, near Dawson Creek.

Company vice-president Jim Gray called the well spectacular and said more testing will be done as soon as a service rig can be moved to the site.

While a flow rate of 19 million cubic feet is not in itself significant — several other wells in B.C. have flowed more than that — it is located in the B.C. side of the Elmworth field, which straddles the Alberta-B.C. boundary.

"We see indications that it may be the same size as the Alberta side," said Gray. "It has a potential now of 30 to 40 trillion cubic feet in a 5,000 square mile area. There's no question it will be at least half that size."

Canadian Hunter has pioneered drilling operations in the Elmworth basin, but most of the drilling so far has been in Alberta, and projections of as much as 50 trillion cubic feet have always applied to Alberta.

Gray said gas from the B.C. side could be produced as early as 1984.

"About 20 wells have been drilled on the B.C. side," he said. "The success rate has been high, but many of the wells are still confidential so we don't know just what has been found."

Estimates of Alberta's proven gas reserves stood at 60 trillion cubic feet at the end of 1978. B.C. reserves had been estimated at eight trillion cubic feet available for production.

Nanaimo again tries to muzzle barkers

NANAIMO (CP) — City council is being asked to make another attempt at silencing barking dogs.

The city's general government committee Wednesday voted to have council ask the province for law changes allowing seizure of barking dogs on public or private properties.

The committee also wants the city to have power to issue tickets for barking dog violations.

The city lawyer's opinion that the former anti-noise bylaw could land city aldermen in jail led to repeal of sections allowing city bylaw officers to enter private property to remove barking dogs.

Council was told at that time bylaw officers may be open to charges of theft and aldermen to charges of counselling a crime.

First bite is free?

TORONTO (CP) — A young British Columbia woman testified Wednesday that after a dog attacked her she had to undergo plastic surgery on her face, but the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board said she must prove it was not the dog's first attack in order to collect any money.

The board said Angela Watts, 22, of Sardis, will also have to show that the dog's owner knew it was vicious. Her lawyer was told to return to the board when he had more facts about the dog.

Mrs. Watts was attacked three years ago by a Doberman pinscher at the home where she was living north of Toronto.

"I don't want the money out of it," she said in an interview. "I just want to have the justice of it."

Foresters threaten strike

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Forestry service workers here say they will take job action if problems stemming from reorganization of the provincial forest ministry are not resolved.

About 75 workers met here Tuesday night to discuss their fears that job losses, retraining and early retirement will result from the reorganization.

The meeting was part of a fact-finding tour by the B.C. Government Employees Union. The union also is holding meets in Revelstoke, Quesnel and Williams Lake, after which it will present its case to the provincial government.

Debby Ward, an area union representative, said the government has not told the union if any jobs have been declared redundant.

She said the reorganization is creating anxiety and stress among some workers.

Abortion board rapped

Victoria General Hospital's therapeutic abortion committee was strongly criticized Wednesday by the board of management for its actions in the abortion controversy.

A special meeting was called to deal with new developments in the controversy — an indication the hospital has no official abortion committee sitting for April and a threat of legal action by the abortion committee.

Chairman Alan Patterson attacked the committee for making the hospital a forum for special interest groups, for seeking legal redress against the board and for releasing to the press a letter it sent to the board before board members received it.

"We're not asking the committee members to go against their conscience. If they don't feel they can approve abortions based on the World Health Organization's definition of health they don't have to serve on the committee, they can resign," said board member Cathy Mountain. "They got on the comittee understanding the past practice of the hospital and then they proceeded to reverse that practice."

But in spite of the heavy criticism of the abortion committee, Patterson said the effect would be nothing more than a rap on the knuckles.

The committee is made up of Drs. David Ripley, H.J. Calder and John Cooper.

The board took no action at the meeting about appointing an abortion committee for April because it was unsure whether the Royal Jubilee Hospital committee intended to resign. A second meeting may be held.

Dr. Douglas Critchley, chairman of the RJH committee, told the Times today a letter will be sent to the VGH board indicating the committee will not consider applications for abortions to be performed at VGH.

This probably means the VGH board will have no choice but to accept the fact the hospital will not have abortions performed for the remainder of the year.

The board was surprised in January when its new abortion committee began turning down almost every abortion application.

The board would probably not have appointed the committee if its intentions had been understood.

The committee, two members of which take a hard line approach to abortions, accuses the board of interfering with the hospital's medical committee system by trying to dictate policy. The committee insists it's acting within the bounds of the Criminal Code.

All abortions being legally performed in the city are being done at Jubilee.

Saanich appeals zoning

Saanich will appeal a B.C. Supreme Court judgment quashing a rezoning bylaw that would have prohibited construction of a Gordon Head office complex.

The judgment by Mr. Justice Victor Dryer allows developers Belvedere Estates Ltd. to go ahead with plans to construct the ofbuilding on a 1.5 acre-Blair Avenue property.

Dryer ruled three months ago against a bylaw changing the zoning of the propoerty from commercial to residential and ordered Saanich to pay court costs.

Saanich decided to change the zoning after public opposition to Belvedere's plan for a 30,000 square-foot structure.

The company claimed the action discriminatory.

Recreation land increased but under new regulations

The provincial government will soon make more Crown land available for recreational purposes and there will be a new set of rules for its acquisition.

"We expect to have several recreational subdivisions this coming summer in various parts of the province," Lands Minister Jim Chabot said Wednesday.

Under the new regulations, non-waterfront lots will be sold but waterfront property will be available only under 30-year leases, with the full lease to be paid in advance.

Holders of current recreation leases will be given the same choice. Leaseholders will be encouraged to buy their properties. Waterfront, however, will be released only on 30-year, prepaid leases.

Chabot offered no information on what new crown lands will be made available.

"That will be announced as time unfolds," he said.

The new deal in recreational land slipped out as the minister discussed new Land Act amendments dealing with non-recreational crown lands.

The amendments are mostly of a housekeeping or deregulation nature. The most important: leases for industrial or commercial lands will be approved for up to 60 years with a cabinet order-in-council. The present maximum is 20 years.

However there is one section in the bill that could have wide-ranging effect, particularly in rural areas. It would simplify procedures for laying trespassing charges against illegal squatters on Crown land.

Chabot said illegal squatters are a major problem in many areas and, under the current, cumbersome regulations, they are very difficult to throw out.

The new regulation won't eliminate the problem, he said, but it should be a big help.

Cowichan land release sought

The Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce wants Premier Bill Bennett to release land in the Cowichan Valley from the Agricultural Land Reserve so job-creating industrial projects can proceed.

The chamber, which says it gathered widespread public support on a petition, said local residents are concerned about the lack of jobs in the Cowichan Valley.

"The large capital outlays in the valley will not create a great number of jobs," the chamber said in a letter to Bennett.

"Labor intensive industry, such as the tourist industry, should be encouraged to develop and create employment in the Cowichan Valley."

The chamber wants land released from the reserve for a proposed industrial park and a new hotel.

The chamber also wants released a report on the Cowichan Bay estuary so business planning can proceed.

Municipal groups and the Cowichan Indian band all have approved controlled growth of the estuary, the chamber said.

NDP privileges motion on Ritchie out of order

An NDP motion to call Socred MLA Bill Ritchie before a special legislative committee of privileges was ruled out of order Wednesday.

Deputy Speaker Walter Davidson, in a lengthy decision citing many precedents, said the motion failed because no specific charge was made against Ritchie in the house.

Former NDP attorney-general Alex Macdonald had called for a committee of privileges to consider whether Ritchie is entitled to sit in the house, by reason of statements he made last week.

The member for Central Fraser Valley — subject of an inquiry into influence-peddling allegations last year — told reporters if he had been at the mercy of the RCMP or the local prosecutor, he would no longer be in public life.

"If I did not have the sort of protection that there is through the attorney-general's department then I would not be in public life," he added.

Associate deputy attorney-general Neil McDiarmid announced last December that Ritchie had been cleared of the influence-peddling allegations.

Only later it became evident that this was McDiarmid's own decision; the RCMP and regional Crown counsel had recommended charges be laid.

Following the deputy speaker's ruling, Macdonald said the NDP will continue to pursue the matter, probably during debate on Attorney-General Allan Williams' estimates.

"The matter cannot be allowed to die," he said.

"There is far too much in the way of suggestions, that seem to be well based, that justice is not being evenly administered in this province."

B.C.Place hearing urged

A public hearing should be held into all aspects of the proposed B.C. Place project designed for Vancouver's False Creek area so residents will be able to find out precisely how it will affect them, Gary Lauk (NDP — Vancouver Centre) said Wednesday.

The project, announced earlier this year by Premier Bill Bennett, involves redevelopment of the entire area with a 60,000-seat stadium as the centrepiece.

The government hopes to have it built in time for Transpo '86, a world transportation exhibition scheduled for Vancouver.

Lauk, in whose riding the project will be built, also wants plans for a light-rapid transit system integrated into the development plans.

And Lauk told the legislature he wants to see a large mixed-income housing project included in the plans.

Gloucester court case waste: NDP

The provincial government should present a clear statement on its plans for 626 acres of land in Langley to save Gloucester Properties Ltd. the trouble of following through with its current court case, NDP leader Dave Barrett said Wednesday.

Gloucester, a development company which wants to build an industrial park on the property, is seeking a B.C. Supreme Court decision on the validity of the Agricultural Land Commission's proposal to hold a public hearing on whether the land should be included in the Agricultural Land Reserve.

Gloucester first applied in May, 1977, to the commission to have the land excluded from the reserve on the grounds that it was not suitable for farm use.

The application was refused and after Gloucester appealed, the cabinet's Environment and Land Use Committee overturned the commission's ruling and ordered that the land be excluded from the reserve.

Under pressure from political opponents and supporters alike, and agriculture groups, Bennett called for the cabinet committee to reconsider its decision. An order-in-council in October, 1979, prohibited development of the property pending the public hearing.

Gloucester then took the government to court, arguing that it had overturned democratic processes.

Barrett said Bennett's statement that he wants the land saved indicates the government intends to keep it in the land reserve.

"Then why is this court case going on?" he asked.

"Why is Gloucester put to these costs, why are the taxpayers put to these costs through this court case if indeed the government intends to keep its word and save this farmland?

"If it intends to save the farmland, then pass an order-in-council or bring in amending legislation now and put the farmland back in the reserve and save everybody, including the courts, time and money."

Release payoff probe: Barrett

An RCMP investigation into the possibility that a major Canadian distillery offered cash to a B.C. political party in anticipation of favors should be released once it is completed, NDP leader Dave Barrett said Wednesday.

The RCMP are acting on information from an Alberta investigation, which cleared liquor companies and political parties in that province of possible illegal activity, but revealed that such activity was alleged to have occured in B.C.

The information was sent to B.C. last month by the Alberta attorney-general's ministry.

B.C. Attorney-General Allan Williams said he has no knowledge of the investigation, saying it is being conducted nationwide by the RCMP.

"It began in the province of Quebec and it's been going on in every province of Canada," he said.

Williams also said he did not know which B.C. party was involved: "I don't even know whether it concerns current political parties."

Barrett said, however, that his party has never been offered and never received cash contributions from a Canadian distillery.

Earlier this year, B.C. liquor distribution branch employees were cleared by an RCMP commercial crime squad investigation of allegations they had been offered bribes.

The investigation was launched after a television report revealed that documents found in a 1978 raid on distillers across the country included cancelled cheques made out by liquor companies to provincial wings of the Liberal, Progressive Conservative and the NDP.

Forestry billing backlog clear

Improved collection procedures, including introduction of a computer system, have allowed the forests ministry to reduce its unbilled accounts to $13.5 million from a high of $118 million at March 31, 1979, Don Johnson, assistant deputy forests minister, said Wednesday.

The ministry's billing practices were criticized in the recent auditor-general's report, which said that had billings been kept current, $45 million of the unbilled account could have been collected and included in 1979 revenue.

Johnson told the legislature's public accounts committee the computer changes and protracted negotiations in setting stumpage rates resulted in the large amount of unbilled income.

However, he said that with recent improvements in the billing system he is reasonably satisfied billings now are getting out on time.

Johnson said there always will be some delays in billings because of necessary changes in setting stumpage rates which result in some forest companies cutting logs before appraisers have determined just how much to charge.

He also pointed out, in response to questions by Peter Hyndman (SC — Vancouver South) that despite the fact billings total more than $550 million, the ministry has had little trouble with bad debts, losing only about $300,000 during the last 10 years on royalties and stumpage fees.

W5 program sparks rally

Victoria's Chinese community is organizing a mass meeting for Sunday to protest against a public affairs program broadcast by CTV which alleged that foreign students are squeezing Canadians out of university.

The Sept. 30, 1979, edition of W5 (The Campus Giveaway), has stirred up indignation in universities and among Canada's ethnic groups with its charges that upwards of 75,000 foreign students were enrolled in Canadian institutions and subsidized by the taxpayer.

"The program is racially prejudicial against not only Chinese Canadians but also other Canadian minorities," says a leaflet prepared by a committee of local Chinese, which includes Saanich Ald. Ed Lum, Willie Eng, a member of the B.C. Human Rights Commission and Philip Chan, president of the Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association.

"The facts and statistics presented in the program have been proved inaccurate. It portrayed students of Chinese origin as foreign regardless of their place of birth and citizenship status," they say.

The meeting is to be held at 1 p.m. in the assembly hall on the top floor of the Chinese public school at 636 Fisgard.

It is open to all. A videotape of the original program will be shown, along with an apology aired by W5 co-host Helen Hutchison earlier this year but which failed to pacify the protests.

There have been complaints to the Canadian Radio, television and Telecommunications Commission and at least one libel suit has been launched against the network.

Theft, possession net one year in jail

Two one-year jail sentences were imposed Wednesday by Victoria county court Judge Peter Millward.

Norman John Jenkinson, 35, admitted a break-in Jan. 4 at W &J Wilson clothiers, 1221 Government, and Donald John McRitchie, 34, pleaded guilty to possession of stolen property. Both guilty pleas were entered Feb. 6.

Crown counsel Peter Birkett said articles worth $3,058 were stolen from the store, but everything was recovered.

In another case, Millward imposed a $200 fine and six months' probation on Bradley Miles Barry, 18, who pleaded guilty March 11 to possession of a small amount of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking Sept. 11 in Esquimalt.

In the history of Canadian politics, there have been few stranger careers than that of Robert Thompson — son of a Norwegian-born Alberta pioneer who'd studied chiropractic and school administration when he went to Ethiopia in 1943 with a team of doctors. Appointed commander of the Imperial Air Force Academy in Addis Ababa by Emperor Haile Selassie, after 15 years as an aviation instructor and missionary it was back to Canada in the late 1950s. Thompson won election to the House of Commons, succeeded Solon Low as leader of the Social Credit Party, became a key man in Parliament during the 1960s, when his bloc of 30 Socred seats made him the kingmaker in the minority governments of John Diefenbaker and Lester Pearson. The 66-year-old father of eight has embarked on yet another career with a Vancouver law firm, where he runs the office and advises in estate planning.

Mother Teresa, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize for her work with lepers in India is planning to visit St. Paul, 150 kilometres northeast of Edmonton, where the town hopes to present her with more than $1 million. A non-denominational charitable organization was established in St. Paul after Mother Teresa's plea for more funds to help the world's poor made during her visit to the Habitat conference in Vancouver four years ago. The group originally planned to raise $100,000 by building a house with volunteer labor and donations and then selling it. Response to the plan has exceeded the original expectations and the group has already collected $560,000. Now with news of the visit by Mother Teresa the group expects a flood of donations to push the fund over the $1 million mark.

It wasn't the smoothest of statements, politically, but Iowa senator James Gallagher isn't apologizing. He incited cat-lovers to dark dreams of mayhem with his attack on a bill that would have assessed a $1,000 fine and a year in jail for any motorist who ran down an animal without stopping to locate its owner or notify police. Huffed Gallagher on the Senate floor, "I can see stopping a car for a dog, but a cat? You squish a cat and go on ..." Gallagher, reeling under a barrage of outraged mail, says he really isn't into cat-squishing — he even lives with one. Says he, "I love animals. I just hate dumb laws."

Dear Abby:

I share a one-bedroom flat with my girlfriend.

About a month ago she asked me if her boyfriend could stay over for the weekend since I was leaving town. I said OK.

When I got back, the boyfriend didn't leave. Instead, he started sleeping on the sofa in the living room. Meanwhile my girlfriend was spending about half the night out there with him on the sofa and I had the bedroom (twin beds) to myself.

Now it turns out that the boyfriend lost his job and he is bunking with us — indefinitely. He's a nice enough guy, but it is very crowded with the three of us in this little flat.

Had It

Dear Had It:

Give him until sundown tonight. Then tell your girlfriend and her boyfriend that three is more of a crowd than you bargained for.

Dear Abby:

My brother's only son was killed two years ago. He was only 16, and his parents are still grieving for him. We never mention the boy's name unless they do, because we know how heartbroken they are. Now the problem:

A cousin recently had a baby boy. And what does she do? She goes ahead and names the baby after our brother's dead son. She and her husband thought they were "honoring" the dead boy by naming their son after him. I happen to think it was a cruel and thoughtless thing to do because now every time my brother and his wife hear that name they will think of the son they lost, and their grief will be renewed.

Need Opinion

Dear Need:

You could be mistaken. Perhaps your brother and his wife feel honored that a child has been named for their son. Judge the deed by the intention. I am sure your cousin and her husband wanted to give only pleasure to the grieving parents, but they should have asked first.

Dear Abby:

My husband and I went on a two-week trip last year and hired a woman to stay in our home and look after our children.

After we came home, I couldn't find my favorite pair of earrings. They were only custome jewerly, but I liked them and wore them with many outfits.

Last evening my husband and I went to a movie, and as we came out, there was this friend who stayed at our home last year, wearing my earrings! Up until that time I wanted to believe that I had just misplaced them. Needless to say, I was shocked. Shall I ask her to return my earrings? Or should I just wait and hope she reads your column and brings them back?

Mrs. A.

Dear Mrs. A.:

Ask her. But don't expect her to bring them back. Any one who would steal would probably lie.

April 14 - 20 Dental Health Week

Time for good mouthkeeping

By LON WOOD

A major segment of Victoria's elderly population is not getting the dental care it needs, according to a city dentist.

"It is a concern of dentists in this area that there are older people who are not benefitting fully from proper dental treatment," said Dr. Donald Poy.

"There are a lot more people in nursing homes than should be who aren't getting the care they should be receiving," he said. "In some cases, it is a simple problem of getting them to and from the dentist's office. In others, it's the need for these people to be encouraged to do what they can do for themselves — in terms of hygiene."

Poy, chairman of the local committee marking April as national Dental Health Month, said increased individual and family awareness can help to encourage better dental care for seniors.

"Dental hygiene and preventative measures start long before we see you in the office — and there are things we just can't do for you that you have to do yourself before you get to us."

Next week, as part of the special month, Dental Health Week will be marked in Victoria.

"This year we have chosen the theme of good nutrition — and good mouthkeeping," Poy told the Times Wednesday.

"What we want people to be aware of is that they can keep their teeth a lot longer by eating wisely," he said. "The culprit is nothing new. Sugar — particularly before bedtime.

"People like a snack before they go to bed. If so, they would help themselves to cut out anything that contains sugar. The reason is that at night there is no saliva flowing to neutralize acids and toxins.

"Your 'jungle mouth' in the morning is the taste of waste products of these bacteria. They multiply and stick together and isolate themselves from the effect of the saliva. They put up a barrier the saliva can't penetrate — working on food you've eaten and also skin cells in the mouth."

Poy said gum diseases compound the problem because there are often deeper pockets where it is easy for bacteria to grow — and much harder to remove food particles.

The most noted sign of unhealthy gums, he said, is any sign of bleeding. "A person should clean their their teeth until their gums don't bleed. By having your teeth cleaned at the dentist's periodically, it makes it a lot easier for you to clean your own and keep them that way."

Poy also said Victorians face a problem factor not found in all other Canadian communities.

"In Victoria we don't have fluorides in the water. We experience much more decay in Victoria — and Vancouver — than they do on the priairies. This is one area dentists have great concern."

He said there is no difference between natuaral fluorides and what could be put in the general water supply.

"You can have too much, or not enough. Dentists are really aware of precisely the amounts that are needed.

Beginning Thursday evening, April 17; on Friday, April 18 and Saturday, April 19, the areas dental community will place personnel and displays at both Hillside and Mayfair malls.

"What we will have is a display on hidden sugars, where people may not be aware of the amount of sugar in certain foods," said Poy. "The Camosun College dental assistants will be in charge of that display.

"We're also going to have a toothbrush exhange. There are certain toothbrushes manufactured that are better.

"Generally, we recommend the soft toothbrushes with the rounded bristles. There are some turkeys in toothbrushes. One new one marketed is actually quite dangerous because you can wear away your tooth and braise the gums quite badly. It has a bent handle. It could help certain people — but for most there's a strong likelihood of wearing away the gum and the tooth."

Water picks and electric toothbrushes?

"For a healthy mouth, people would not have to use these," said the dentist. "They can be effective, but for most, paying more attention manually is still best.

"In some special cases — such as people with bands on their teeth or having advanced peridontal disease — the water pick is useful.

"The problem with the water pick is that it doesn't remove all the plaque of the tooth. Manual scrubbing does this best."

Politicians tops as heavy bruxers

By MAX MANSFIELD
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — U.S. State Department spokesman Hodding Carter III does it. The chairman of a large District of Columbia bank does it. Politicians, Capitol Hill secretaries, Cabinet officers, White House staffers, Georgetown matrons, Pentagon generals, diplomats and bureaucrats do it.

In fact, Washingtonians are grinding their teeth to the tune of thousands of dollars in dental bills each month as "bruxing" joins the litany of stress-related ailments in the nation's capital.

"Here in Washington, people reach the top of their professions," Dr. Daniel J. Deutsch said Friday. "Everbody's just grinding away."

Teeth grinding, or bruxism as the medical journals refer to it, is usually associated with stress. The "bruxer" normally "bruxes" during the night and is not aware of the habit unless the grinding and clicking of molar on molar awakens his or her bed partner.

In that case, the "bruxer" is outfitted with a clear acrylic "night guard" similar to the protective retainer worn by boxers and other athletes. It prevents the teeth from grinding against one another and often relieves the symptoms associated with "bruxing"; morning headaches, soreness of the jaw, neck aches, ringing of the ears and dizziness.

"I make lots of night guards," said Deutsch, a 33-year-old Washington dentist. "I made one for a politician, but he refuses to wear it. I guess he thought it wasn't sexy."

The dentist also said he had made husband-and-wife night guards. "That way, they don't feel so funny. Can they kiss each other? Sure, all you have to do is pucker."

Deutsch estimated that 25 per cent of his patients suffered from bruxism. "Lots of people do it," he said.

Although Hodding Carter's duties have become more nerve-wracking since the Iranian hostage crisis, the State Department spokesman said he's been "bruxing;" for a long time.

"The stress pattern is there. It was going on way before Iran," he said, adding that he does not wear a night guard. "It's really not that bad. You don't hear them cracking in the night."

Although several area dentists say that the profession is becoming increasingly aware of the problem, the dental anguish itself is as old as the Egyptian scrolls.

"You talk about tension," said Dr. Alan Winner, a local bruxism specialist, "can you imagine having to build a pyramid? You can be sure they were grinding away."

Winner said Washington was a strong contender for the unofficial teeth grinding capital of the world, "although it would be tough to beat New York city."

The young downtown dentist, who often see gold crowns completely ground down, devotes one-third of his practice to bruxism patients. "It's so common in this city," he said.

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

There is a history of heart attacks in my family. I am contemplating marriage and feel that I owe it to my future family to lay out a program that might help me to avoid having such an attack. I am 32.

Mr. S.E.

Dear Mr. E.:

Most people of your age, especially those who are in excellent health, do not often give serious consideration to long-range planning for health. When a group of college students is told that smoking can reduce their longevity by 10 or more years, they cannot conceive that they will eventually treasure each year of good health.

Heart attacks can, in a measure, be predicted. There are now many computerized methods by which the major causes of heart attacks can be studied and programs laid out for their prevention. There once was little that could be done about genetic backgrounds in people who have high cholesterol and high triglycerides and tendencies toward early-age heart attacks. Today, remarkable advances have been made that can reduce familial high cholesterol and high lipid levels.

Your premarital examination has, of course, ruled out gross evidence of disease. There are many well-known factors that contribute to heart attacks:

1) Undiagnosed and untreated high blood pressure increases the risk of heart attacks.

2) Extra weight certainly adds an unnecessary burden on the heart.

3) Latent diabetes must be brought to the surface. The undetected diabetic can be readily recognized. With intensive treatment, the diabetic can attain normal longevity and need not accept this disorder as a threat to his health.

4) Tobacco — especially cigarettes — plays a most important role in the narrowing of the blood vessels, especially those that supply the heart with blood and oxygen. The relationship between smoking and chronic bronchitis and emphysema is undeniable. Once emphysema has set in, it is irreversible and leaves its desperate effect on the lungs and, subsequently, on the heart.

This is a program that can be carefully laid out to give you and your family the added security of living in good health. If, in addition, you were to learn the techniques of reducing emotional tensions and anxieties, you would make an enormous contribution to your well-being — since emotional pressures in the home and in business are known to be significant factors in creating a potential for heart attacks.

Daydreams: Not just fluff

By JANE BRODY
New York Times

You get into bed, turn out the light and suddenly remember your mother's birthday is tomorrow and you haven't yet sent a card.

You are plodding to work through snowy streets and your mind wanders to that Caribbean vacation you'd love to take and how you might pay for it.

At the dinner table, you suddenly hear your son say, "Well, what's your answer?" But you never heard the question because you were having a mental argument with your boss.

Stuck on a long line at the airport, you while away the endless minutes wondering what you'd say or do if your old boyfriend were on the plane.

Daydreams, those thoughts that leap unbidden into your mind. Though they have long been disparaged as signs of hidden hostility, repressed sexuality and neurosis or as simply a waste of time, recent studies of daydreams have shown them to be an extremely useful — perhaps essential — human phenomenon.

Daydreams, these studies show, are not just the idle fluff of an empty mind. They can help you solve current problems, prepare for future events, ward off tension, relieve boredom, dispel fear, dissipate anger and lift depression. They can help to build self-esteem and may even increase the chances for success. Many sports figures spur themselves on to victory by imagining the act of winning.

Even those daydreams that might be described as bizarre fantasies can be useful, perhaps changing bad moods or enhancing self-image. Children who daydream a lot tend to be happier, more cooperative and have longer staying power than those who don't often let their imaginations run away with them, according to studies by Dr. Jerome Singer, a Yale University psychologist and author, with Ellen Switzer, of Mind Play. (The book is to be published this month by Spectrum Books, a division of Prentice-Hall.

Many artists, writers and scientists have their most creative insights through daydreams. Archimedes realized how to use water to measure an object's density while immersing himself in a bathtub. Gazing at the sun setting on the River Seine inspired many of Debussy's Impressionistic compositions.

Yet, Singer points out, many people are embarrassed by their daydreams or are afraid to let their fantasies unfold. Some repress their daydreams as useless wanderings. Others are so busy they don't take the time for mind-wandering. Still others click on the television to escape through someone else's fantasies, which are not necessarily relevant to their own personal situations.

Daydreams, the studies have shown, are a nearly universal experience that reflect a basic need of the human mind to fill itself with thought.

"Many of the things we do are automatic," says Dr. Eric Klinger, a psychologist at the University of Minnesota. "When we're not using our full thinking capacity, the mind works over other aspects of life. "This is an efficient use of our thought spaces."

His studies showed that 30 to 40 per cent of our waking moments are typically spent daydreaming. Most daydreams are just passing thoughts lasting 5 to 14 seconds, such as wondering what to wear to a party. Interspersed are shorter scraps of thought — "I must remember to buy toilet paper" — and longer reveries lasting perhaps a minute or two.

The daydreaming child is often happier

Research by Dr. Leonard Giambra of the National Institute on Aging has shown that, contrary to what you might think, elderly persons do not while away their hours immersed in daydreams, mulling over might-have-been's or reliving the past. Men aged 75 to 91 daydream as often about the present and future as they do about the past, his studies show. In fact, the frequency of daydreams decreases with age, with men over 75 reporting that they daydream only one-fourth as often as males 17 to 23.

But as you might expect, the leading subject of daydreams among young men is sex. For young women, sexual daydreams occur less often. In both sexes, sexual daydreams are most common among those who are most active sexually. Only after about 30 do sexual daydreams of men yield to those of a problem-solving nature. Females apparently daydream more often than males, with problem-solving daydreams the most common type at all ages. According to Klinger's studies, only about one in five daydreams contain weird or distorted images and far fewer represent bizarre flights of fancy.

Singer points out that there are many ways in which you can make daydreams work to your advantage. The most important use is to play-act your way through problems, rehearsing solutions or reactions to possible future events or situations, or carrying out a mental argument until the matter seems settled in your mind. Other possibilities suggested by Singer include the following:

—You can use them simply to fill up time — to amuse yourself, for example, when you have to wait and can do nothing else or when you're driving long distances on a boring road. Since daydreams are associated with a relaxed state, they help to reduce restlessness and tension that could raise your blood pressure or produce other unwanted signs of stress. He cites studies in which persons were enclosed in a booth for a long time and given a "mindless" boring task to do. Those who daydreamed didn't realize how much time had passed.

—You can often reverse unpleasant moods and counter feelings of depression with "positive" fantasies, especially those that enhance self-esteem, such as daydreams in which you imagine yourself winning an Oscar or the U.S. Open or being named president of the company. Daydreams about happy events, joyful feelings or peaceful scenes can relax the muscles of your head and perhaps even ward off tension headaches.

—Bizarre fantasies can help to diminish anger. Let's say you're angry with the boss for not giving you a raise and you're about to confront the matter head-on. Since anger may not be the best emotion for such a confrontation, you could dissipate it by imagining the boss opening a bottle of champagne and giving you a promotion

And a raise, or by picturing the boss standing up to shake your hand and losing his pants (or her skirt).

—Athletes and musicians who engage in fantasy practice — as well as physically practicing their skills — tend to do better in carrying them out. Daydreams about other activities may also help you perform them better.

—If you have phobias, you can use daydreams to diminish your fear. For example, if you are afraid of flying, you can imagine yourself on the plane talking to a fascinating seatmate or reading a racy novel and having a wonderful time. If you're frightened about taking a test, you can daydream about something pleasant and peaceful and calm yourself down. By the same token, however, if you allow your daydreams to picture the worst (a plane crash or flunking the test), you could greatly enhance your fears.

—Daydreams can sometimes be a clue to an important problem that is not being resolved or a need not being met. For example, one Madison Avenue advertising executive found himself constantly daydreaming about sailing. He finally decided to invest in a charter yacht and is now happy as a lark running a business in the Caribbean. If you find that daydreams constantly intrude at inappropriate times, it could be a sign that something is wrong in your life and professional guidance may be needed.

Overnutrition a problem

By MARLENE ORTON

Morrison

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer complaints about soaring food costs have not inhibited people from doing what they seem to like best: eating.

Most Canadians are overweight. Many are out of shape, unhealthy and susceptible to cardiovascular diseases, the leading killer in North America and Europe.

Although the cost of a nutritious diet for a family of four for a week was $62.62 in January, 1980, compared with $57.04 the previous year, nutritionists say people can eat better for less.

Says Dr. Alex Morrison, head of the federal health protection branch: "Our major nutritional problem is one of over-nutrition. We eat too much fat, too much salt and too much sugar."

Health and nutrition experts have spent years urging Canadians to count their calories as well as their pennies when grocery shopping.

The main idea behind campaign slogans for improved lifestyles is getting people on a healthful diet and cutting the billion-dollar medical bills by reducing heart disease.

Nearly $2 billion is spent each year on heart disease. One-fifth of all days spent in hospital are by patients recovering from heart attacks, high blood pressure and strokes, says the health department.

"Two of three adults are overweight," says Morrison. "We have problems of cardiovascular disease which has a clear dietary component."

How does food affect the heart? Heart experts explain:

—Obesity can lead to higher incidence of high blood pressure or diabetes.

The elderly and families living on small fixed incomes face special problems. Three-quarters of retired people live on less than $5,000 a yaar. They frequently suffer malnutrition but not necessarily because of their poverty.

Few elderly widowers know how to shop and cook. Older women who have spent years feeding large families will not bother making a nutritious meal for one.

"It's also difficult for seniors who have known a pretty limited selection of foods to go into a supermarket stocked with a sophisticated variety of goods, not all of which is food," Mrs. Gillis says.

An elderly person may not know the difference between an orange crystal drink mix, with added vitamin C and food coloring, and frozen orange juice concentrate, which duplicates Mother Nature's own with vitamin C, vitamin A, potassium and folic acid (needed for red blod cells).

Bert Dodd and the British Columbia government had the right idea a few years ago with the Senior Chef television show designed especially for the elderly.

Simplified gourmet ideas like moussaka or cabbage roll are included for the more daring. Each recipe is accompanied by suggestions for a rounded, nutritious, yet inexpensive meal.

Her shopping tips are also included in the health department's guide to Shopping for Nutrition:

The best nutrition guide is the Canada Food Guide developed by the federal government in 1942. It recommends daily servings from each of four categories: milk and milk products, bread and cereals, fruits and vegetables and meat and alternates.

First of two parts

The "vitamin cult" which so many Canadians seem to be joining is a worry to many health professionals. Hypervitaminosis — caused by taking huge or megadoses of certain vitamins is one of the fast growing problems in North America.

Certainly, the value of taking certain vitamin supplements to correct certain disorders has been proven. Vitamins B and C are used to assist in the treatment of alcoholics because they are generally malnourished, for example.

But it seems to be in vogue these days to pop vitamin pills whether you need to or not — and everyone from the elderly to the young, the well-to-do to the poor seems to be doing it.

A recent article from The Professional Nutritionist, states that vitamins in U.S. supermarkets increased 192 per cent from 1973 to 1977. Vitamin purchases from health food stores, door-to-door sales people and mail order establishments continue to show striking gains.

The reasons, the article states, for this self-treatment phenomenon are insecurities concerning the vitamin content of the food supply, the constant bombardment by vitamin enthusiasts for other to jump on the bandwagon as "insurance" and statements by some poorly informed members of scientific and general public that large doses of specific vitamins are of value in treating a disease, a symptom, or even will prevent the occurence of a disease! (One Boston taxidriver told us he was taking 1,500 mg. daily of vitamin C — and was convinced he would not be a potential cancer victim as a result). The vitamin cult appear to back their beliefs on the magic of vitamins — on speculation and fancy — not on scientific fact!

The letters we receive from readers indicate a strong interest in knowing what vitamins are, and what each vitamin actually does in the body. From time to time over the next few weeks, we'll look at vitamins in detail. But let's start first of all by defining vitamins.

Vitamins are actually chemical compounds required in very small amounts, for the maintenance of good health. They usually perform specific functions within the body. Vitamins are needed in the diet since they either cannot be eynthesized at all in the body, which is otherwise a very efficient chemical factory, or else they are made in too small amounts to satisfy the human requirement. Therefore, these must be supplied in the diet in the amounts stated in the Recommended Dietary Nutrient Intake.

Vitamins have been traditionally divided into two groups — those which are fat soluble, vitamins A, D. E, K, and those which are water soluble, the B vitamins and vitamin C. Fat soluble vitamins are capable of being stored in various organs of the body, e.g., the liver and adipose tissue. But, water-soluble vitamins if taken in excess of need, are excreted rapidly via the urine.

If over a long period of time, you lack certain vitamins that are needed to maintain essential body processes, you may develop specific deficiency diseases. These diseases are extremely rare, and can be reversed early by eating the proper food that supplies the missing vitamins.

Deficiency symptoms and diseases resulting from vitamin shortages are well known. Let's take a look at what happens if you're short on the A and B vitamins. Vitamin A is essential to membrane structures, normal functioning of body cells, especially those in the eye. As far as the B vitamins go, thiamin deficiency can result in a disorder that's rare in North America, called beri-beri. Riboflavin deficiency produces changes in te skin, greasy eruptions and cracks at the corners of the mouth, and a purple tongue.

Folacin, a term used for all of the folic acid compounds, when taken in amounts less than required, results in a certain type of anemia. Vitamin B12 deficiency, results in a similar type of anemia but also produces changes in the cells in the intestinal tract, the bone marrow, and nervous system. The vitamin B12 deficiency disease "pernicious anemia" is sometimes seen in alcoholics.

But you don't need to take supplements to ensure your supply of these or most other vitamins is adequate! Just eat lots of fresh fruit, leafy green vegetables and whole-grain cereals.

Development plans upset Weir's Beach residents

In a letter to the Capital Regional District Wednesday, Richard Hunt, spokesman for the Sandgate Ratepayers, expressed concern about a permit given for alteration of a house into a duplex at 5177 William Head Road.

Hunt said the duplex would have a septic tank system too close to the lagoon and also questioned whether adequate provision for septic tanks is being made at a campsite in the area.

Metchosin director Mac Tipton said residents are probably going to challenge the duplex permit and warned that if it is revoked, the builder could take action against the regional district.

"Prospective buyers want to be assured that health regulations concerning legal setbacks will never be enforced since they could lose their investment, yet they wish the health of their children to be protected from whatever pests may breed in the lagoon and do not want pollution to shut down the campground," he told directors.

He said legal setbacks from roads, property perimeters and other campers are not being met and that the septic field is too close to the water table and lagoon.

If beach cabins are occupied all year, instead of the permitted six months, the sewage system will be under even greater pressure, Hunter warned.

Regional health officer Dr. Allen Arneil said he has received no reports of malfunctioning septic tanks in the area.

He said when campsite regulations were first put in place in 1967, the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board had instituted a policy for existing campsites which did not insist on immediate compliance with the new standards.

The policy was formulated in order not to inflict undue hardship and expense on owners.

Arneil said his predecessor, Dr. J.L.M. Whitbread, had classified the lagoon as tidal and the duplex permit had been issued on that assumption.

The Capital Regional District Wednesday asked Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm for authority to increase borrowing to $4.1 million for the contentious Ganges sewer and outfall project.

The district had been given permission to install a $2.7 million collection system, treatment plant and outfall but the Pollution Control Board ruled a longer outfall is needed, jumping the cost to $4.1 million.

"This will make the cabinet responsible to decide whether they think it is proper to expend this amount of money," board chairman Jim Campbell said. "If they decide it is not proper and they withhold the power, we can say sewers are your problem, not ours."

Solid waste disposal committee chairman Bob Wright noted the system, which would serve 205 properties, would cost an average $20,000 per property.

Whatever happens, residents will have to pay $250,000 for work done to date but Salt Spring Island director Yvette Valcourt said residents had never authorized such an expenditure.

There was some discussion about holding a referendum in Ganges but directors were told this could not be done legally until the November election at the earliest.

Last week the solid waste disposal committee was told six acres near the intersection of Sooke and Kangaroo Roads could be leased from owner Stan Cosburn at $400 per acre a year.

The matter was to be dealt with at Wednesday's regional board meeting. When it wasn't, reporters were told by chairman Bob Wright that Cosburn had changed his mind after receiving objections from his neighbors.

O'Brien appointed planner

Edmonton transit planner W.B. O'Brien has been appointed the Capital Regional District's first chief transit planner at a starting salary of $37,560.

He will start work May 19.

CRD executive director Dennis Young said O'Brien has the qualifications, experience and personality for the job.

O'Brien will have a 12-month probationary period in keeping with the CRD's standing policy for appointment of department heads.

Clover Point pipe purchase okayed

The Capital Regional District agreed Wednesday to authorize consultants CH2M Hill to spend $139,700 plus freight and taxes on 2,850 feet of steel pipe for the Clover Point outfall extension.

The consultants said the polyethelene pipe left over from a previous abortive attempt to build the outfall is unsuitable. Regional engineers hope to sell it elsewhere.

The new pipe will be purchased from Interprovincial Steel and Pipe Corporation Ltd.

Regional engineer Norman Howard told the directors the company has the pipe left over from another project where it did not meet specifications. He assured them the pipe is stronger than the specifications required for the outfall.

He said two other companies had been contacted and the Interprovincial pipe, at $41.52 per foot, was the best buy.

It was also decided the consultants should pay Shaw Pipe Protections (Alberta) Ltd. $74,625 plus tax to coat and line the pipe.

Montreal bank job capital of Canada

MONTREAL (CP) — This metropolis continues to have the dubious distinction of being the bank holdup capital of Canada, recent statistics compiled by the Canadian Bankers' Association show.

Of 1,122 robberies of chartered banks across Canada last year, 698 took place in the Montreal Urban Community, says association security director Michael Ballard.

That figure does not even count holdups at trust companies or credit unions, nor bank robberies in suburbs north or south of the MUC, including Laval, the second-largest municipality in Quebec.

The courts must deal with armed robbers "in an exemplary manner" if the number of holdups is to be reduced, Ballard said in an interview Wednesday.

In comparison with Quebec's staggering total of 871 bank holdups in 1979, Ontario had 116, British Columbia 67, Alberta 49, Manitoba 10, Nova Scotia seven, and Saskatchewan and New Brunswick one each. There were none in Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland or the Northwest Territories.

There was a 12.3 per cent increase in bank robberies in 1979 — up to 1,122 from 998. However, holdupmen made off with 10.7 per cent less, $3.27 million in 1979 compared with $3.67 million in 1978.

The average amount lost per incident decreased to $2,924 in 1979 from $3,681 in 1978. In Quebec, the 1979 average was $2,499, down from $2,723 in 1978.

"This is lower than is the case generally in Canada because the greater number of robberies makes banks more conscious of taking security measures," he said.

One effect of having smaller amounts of money available in banks in recent years is that most holdups now are carried out by lone gunmen. "In the late sixties gang robberies were the thing," but with minimal amounts of cash on hand, the risk is no longer worth it for a team, Ballard added.

Ottawa to pump $50M into electronics industry

OTTAWA (UPC) — The federal government will spend $50 million over the next three years to help the electronics industry compete with other western nations in high technology.

In his first major speech since his cabinet appointment, Industry Minister Herb Gray told the Canadian Advanced Technology Association Wednesday the government — a large purchaser of electronic goods and services — would also aim its contracts at Canadian industry.

In addition, he said, the government would review suggested improvements to the tax system for research and development.

Gray said about $21 million of the $50 million would be granted to Mitel Semiconductor Inc. to provide 750 jobs at the company's plants in Bromont, Que. and Kanata, Ont., near Ottawa.

The government would consider additional aid to the industry if other "viable projects" were submitted to his department, Gay told reporters.

The financial assistance would be made available to Canadian firms to support research and development and engineering.

Former Globe publisher dies

TORONTO (CP) — James Lees Cooper, former editor-in-chief and publisher of The Globe and Mail, died of a heart attack Wednesday in West Palm Beach, Fla. He was 73.

Cooper was named Globe and Mail publisher in 1965, a position he held until his retirement in 1974.

SASKATOON (CP) — The federal Liberal party is apparently going ahead with its plan to twin Eastern Liberals MPs with constituencies in the West.

Doug Richardson, the unsuccessful Liberal candidate in Saskatoon East in the Feb. 18 federal election, said Wednesday the riding has been twinned with Ottawa Centre to give Western Canada a bigger voice in federal affairs.

The idea behind 'twinning' is that Liberal MPs would be assigned as spokesmen for Western ridings in national policy discussions.

Mail snooping popular sport for Big Brother

VANCOUVER (CP) — Internal government documents show various federal ministries, not only the RCMP, have been snooping in the private correspondence of Canadians, according to The Vancouver Sun.

The newspaper said Wednesday such diverse ministries as national revenue, transport, agriculture and health and welfare, as well as the previous and current Liberal governments of Prime Minister Trudeau, the Progressive Conservative government of Joe Clark and a caucuses of Tory MPs, applied pressure on the post office to allow the opening of mail.

The Sun said the documents were disclosed by civil servants critical of the ease with which politicians and other government officials are successfully arguing for the legal right to open mail based on what they consider to be flimsy justification.

The documents state, as previously reported, that the RCMP has been opening mail illegally at least since 1932.

They also show that far from acting in concert with the RCMP, senior postal officials were unaware of the nature and extent of RCMP mail operations. The documents indicated senior postal officials were often bypassed by police, who make secret arrangements with individual postal workers and minor officials.

The documents disclosed that postal officials have given police access to change-of-address forms, provided the names of people renting postal boxes and allowed them to record information on envelopes.

The Sun said the documents show that at least until last year customs officials opened letter mail in contravention of the Post Office Act on the basis of a legal interpretation of their own. They backed off only under pressure from J. C. Corkery, deputy postmaster-general, it said.

The officials warned that changes to the Customs Act giving customs officers unfettered right to open mail, approved by the previous Liberal and Conservative cabinets, would give rise to "considerable opposition by civil libertarians."

They said it would also require considerable justification that postal officials "have been unable, at any time, to obtain."

Meanwhile, In Ottawa, Solicitor General Robert Kaplan says the government will await the report of the McDonald Royal Commission into RCMP wrong-doing before introducing legislation allowing police to open mail.

Kaplan and National Revenue Minister William Rompkey have already said they favor giving the RCMP and custom officers the power to open first-class mail during the course of investigations.

Kaplan told a news conference Wednesday he hopes the mail opening will control the expected "enormous increase" in Turkish heroin coming into Canada and the United States this year.

His report of the heroin problem will be ready next week and will set out the "sort of reasons" police should be given powers to open mail, Kaplan said.

Kaplan met with Royal Commission Chairman Justice David McDonald for more than two hours Wednesday and was assured the commission's major recommendations and its core report would be given to the government this summer.

"I told Mr. McDonald I wanted him to look at giving the police power to open mail, but I am going to wait until I receive his report before doing anything," Kaplan said.

"It (mail opening) seems to be a kind of normal police power that is within the range of sorts of activities Canadians grant to the police. You have to ask yourself how seriously they (the public) want drugs to be fought ... If it can be demonstrated drug trafficking or organized crime can be more effectively combated by the police having these extra powers, it's then a matter to decide whether we want them to have the power or not.

"I do. I think its a good idea."

CP Air set to fly eastern routes

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission Wednesday announced that CP Air has been given permission to extend its transcontinental service to Halifax from Toronto.

The announcement said CP Air could use B-737 aircraft to provide twice-daily round-trip service between Halifax and Toronto and a single daily return trip linking Halifax, Montreal and Toronto.

But the commission said no local traffic will be allowed between Montreal and Halifax prior to March 1, 1981.

The commission, at the same time, announced it had rejected an application by Eastern Provincial Airways — recently allowed to operate a daily non-stop service between Halifax and Montreal — to extend its service to Toronto.

Shock report predicts death for Confederation

By CAROL GOAR
FP News Service

MONTREAL — Canada is disintegrating so rapidly as a nation that by 1990 Manitoba and the Maritimes could be the only provinces left defending Confederation, says the author of a major study released today.

Caroline Pestiau of the C.D. Howe Research Institute said in an interview with FP News Service this week that the enormity of her findings shocked even her.

What began three years ago as an economic research project to prepare Quebec voters for this spring's referendum on separation unexpectedly mushroomed into a scenario of a country falling apart at the seams.

"This is not a Quebec-Ottawa problem," said the economist. "Rene Levesque's separatism is only the catalyst that set off the process of disintegration.

Pestiau even goes so far as to say the tumultuous self-assessment that has swept Quebec into the headlines in the last few years is an open, healthy way of testing Confederation. Other dissatisifed provinces would be well-advised to get their doubts and questions into the open rather than making ominous complaints, she says.

"The process is accelerating. Within five or 10 years one could conceive of a situation in which only the Maritimes and Manitoba were interested in economic integration."

FP News Services confronted one of the men most responsible for making Canada work as an economic unit, Trade Minister Ed Lumley, with the findings of the C.D.Howe report in an two-hour interview Tuesday.

Lumley had not seen the study, but said he had thought a great deal about the issue it raised.

"We've got to learn to work collectively. It's part of being a Canadian, part of staying together. The maintenance of a Canadian common market is a priority of this government."

Asked whether he had specific plans, Lumley replied that it was more a question of values and leadership than government policy.

"If people want to make something work, it's going to work. They've got to want to be part of a common market. It's one of those things I just can't quantify. It's an investment in my future as a Canadian."

It took the Howe Institute three years of exhaustive research — into everything from Quebec's textile industry to the St. Lawrence Seaway — to reach its pessimistic conclusion.

Pestiau was a natural choice as project manger. A fluently bilingual economist who has spent the last 20 years observing and charting the development of Quebec, she agreed shortly after the election of the Parti Quebecois in 1976 to lead a special team of economists in the most intensive exploration of a provincial economy ever undertaken in this country.

The Howe Institute felt it was crucial that all the complex, emotional issues tangled up in the separatism debate be sorted out calmly and objectively.

Now, 14 publications later, Pestiau says she is wiser and humbler.

"Three years ago I didn't realize the extent to which the other provinces were not participating, or participating half-heartedly in Confederation. I was skeptical about western alienation. I figured it was just a slogan.

"I always suspected Quebec had a case for separatism. But what's new to me is that the other provinces do as well."

The study, a 132-page document entitled Economic Realities of Contemporary Confederation, concludes: "As we enter the 1980s, strong forces in Canada are questioning whether Confederation provides the most suitable framwork for optimizing living standards.

"We argue that neither regional fragementation nor sovereignty-association can be expected to increase the (country's) economic surplus."

Although there is a clear leaning toward the federalist option, Pestiau says the idea of the study was not to come up with a simple prescription telling Quebecers how they should vote in their referendum later this year. This would jeopardize the Howe Institute's standing as a non-political body.

However, it does recommend several courses of action:

The federal government's long-promised industrial strategy should adopt as its underlying philosophy that each region's best long-term economic hope lies in becoming a centre of excellence in a few fields — Quebec in the aerospace industry and advanced communications, for example — rather than a mish-mash of hundreds of industries duplicated in other provinces.

Instead of making angry noises and vague threats, provinces such as Alberta should follow the Quebec lead and seriously explore what their future would be outside Confederation.

They should see what kind of a deal they could get with the United States as individual trading partners, explore how they would pay for necessities as defence and postal service and find out how investors and large corporations would treat them if they became small, self-contained states.

"They have to size up the options. This has been taboo for too long and and it has been very unhealthy."

Finally, the federal government must become much more sensitive to regional differences and regional needs if the country is to have any chance of surviving intact. Today's kind of federalism is clearly not working.

Ex-FLQ bomber paroled

MONTREAL (CP) — Pierre-Paul Geoffroy, the former Front de Liberation du Quebec (FLQ) bomber sentenced to 124 concurrent life sentences plus 25 years in 1969, has been granted parole.

National Parole Board spokesman Serge Lavallee said Wednesday a five-member review board unanimously recommended that Geoffroy be paroled after studying his latest application.

Beginning next week and for four months, Geoffroy, 34, will be able to leave prison five days a week to participate in non-profit projects for the underprivileged and handicapped. However, he will have to return to prison at night.

Later, Lavallee said, Geoffroy will be placed in a halfway house for six months prior to receiving full parole.

Geoffroy, 35, was sentenced after entering a blanket guilty plea — widely interpreted as a move to protect other FLQ members — to 129 charges arising from 31 terrorist bombings.

The parole board had turned down four applications for full parole since he became eligible in 1976.

Bad luck is often a factor in the outcome of a hand, but there are cases where bad luck can be overcome by good management. Here is a typical case.

Let's say you're in six spades and West leads a diamond. At first sight the only loser appears to be a heart, but when you win the diamond with the king and play the ace of trumps, East shows out and your stock plummets sharply. The slam apparently must go down one.

But if you have the correct attitude, you start to think in terms of how the contract can be made despite the foul trump break. And if you think about the matter long enough, you come up with the right answer. The task is not as hopeless as it looks, because there is a possibility of making the slam if the rest of the cards are well placed.

There is no way of escaping the trump loser, so you set your sights on avoiding the heart loser. It may require some luck to meet this goal, but if you don't buy a ticket you can't expect to win the raffle. What you do is pray that West was dealt the king of hearts and that you can eventually force him to lead from it.

In line with this, you cash the A-K of clubs and ruff a club. Next you cash the A-Q of diamonds and ruff a diamond. Finally, you cash the K-Q of trumps and exit from dummy with a trump.

West is compelled to win the trump and, with only two cards left — the K-9 of hearts — he must lead one. It does not matter whether he plays the nine or the king — in either case you lose no heart tricks and make the slam.

HUDAC optimistic help on mortgages coming

OTTAWA (CP) — The president of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada said today he is optimistic about the chances of cabinet approving the group's proposal to subsidize mortgage rates for home buyers this year.

George Frieser of Edmonton said at a news conference that the plan had received a favorable response from Housing Minister Paul Cosgrove during a meeting Wednesday.

And he said he hopes the response from the federal cabinet will also be favorable.

Frieser was commenting about the same time that cabinet began meeting to put finishing touches on the speech from the throne that will open the new session of Parliament Monday.

The association's plan calls for federal assistance to reduce the mortgage rate to 12 per cent this year from current rates as high as 17.75 per cent.

The assistance would be available to those buying homes, either new or existing homes, but not to those simply renewing mortgages.

Frieser said mortgage renewals were excluded to keep the cost of the program down and to avoid any more distortion than necessary in the marketplace.

SPRAY TREES NOW FOR WINTER MOTH

Apply Methoxychlor or Methoxychlor plus Insecticidal Soap at the recommended rates during April 10 - 14, 1980. Orthene (acephate) may be used on non-food plants.

For more information write for 1980 recommendations and a free pamphlet entitled "The Winter Moth on Vancouver Island" available from the Publications Office, B.C. Ministry of Agriculture, Parliament Buildings, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2Z7.

ACTRA names Francks top actor

TORONTO (UPC) — Don Francks, a greying, long-haired veteran actor who has done it all without ever becoming famous, was credited with Canadian television's best acting performance in 1979 Wednesday night at the annual ACTRA awards.

Francks, who made it from an engagement at the posh Harbor Castle Hotel just in time to receive his award, was picked for his sensitive portrayal of junkie Pete Brenman in the CBC docu-drama "They're Drying up the Streets."

"Streets," depicting life on the seedy side of Toronto's Yonge Street, was also selected as the best television program of the year and brought the award for best new TV performer to Sarah Torgov for her disturbing portrayal of a drunk.

Francks showed up to accept the "Nellie" — an eight-inch high statuette depicting a corpulent, naked woman — moments after his daughter, thinking he was not going to make it, accepted it on his behalf. Reciting a poem with the recurring line "... if everyone was listening, you know, we could save this show ..." Francks said "I only wish this media, all this power I see out there, could be used to make this planet a safer place for our children ... I want to thank Canadians for being so open-minded to let a utopian win something."

Seventeen "Nellies" were presented by the Association of Canadian Television and Radio Artists, the Canadian broadcasters' union, during a nationally-televised awards-and-variety program.

Nominations for most awards were made by the union's locals, with outside judges making the final decisions.

Paul Harding, who played Colonel Jurgens in "A Man Called Intrepid," was named best supporting actor over competitors Christopher Plummer in "Riel" and Gerard Parkes in "A Gift To Last."

Rock singer Burton Cummings won a "Nellie" for best television variety performance for his role in "Portage and Main," beating singer Salome Bey, ballet star Karen Kain and figure skater Toller Cranston.

Brian Linehan, interviewer on "City Lights," took the award for best television interviewer, edging Larry Stout of "Newsmagazine" and Patrick Watson of the "Watson Report."

The trio of Michael Hirsh, Patrick Lubert and Clive Smith accepted an award from Secretary of State David MacDonald for producing the year's best children's television program, "Intergalactic Thanksgiving."

Ralph Thomas and Roy MacGregor took the honors for best dramatic television writing, for "Every Person is Guilty." Also nominated were actor Gordon Pinsent for The CBC's "A Gift To Last," and Roy Moore for "Riel."

The best television variety writing award went to comedians Johnny Wayne and Frank Shuster and writers Kate and Ted Lonsdale, for "The Wayne and Shuster Show."

Barbara Young won the best TV documentary writing honors for her work in "Penny Kitchen," and "Newsday" segment.

Veteran broadcaster Gordon Sinclair presented the award named after him to Ricki Katz and Susan Millican for outspoken opinions and integrity in broadcasting.

In radio broadcasting, Terence McKenna was tops in documentary and public affairs writing for the CBC's "Aftermath of Jonestown," which also won the award for best radio program of the year.

Floods add to N.Y. woes

NEW YORK (AP) — Flooded highways aggravated the rush-hour confusion in beleaguered New York City today as millions of commuters sloshed to work in the 10th day of a bus and subway strike.

But although skies were gloomy, hopes were brighter that an end of the strike might be near. Negotiators were returning to the bargaining table amid reports, for the first time, that some progress has been made in the talks.

Meanwhile, commuters headed into the city at a crawl after 8.6 centimetres of rain flooded highways and closed many roads.

Despite the weather, traffic officials estimated that 250,000 cars — the maximum the city can handle — made it to Manhattan.

One striker was arrested on disorderly conduct charges in The Bronx after police say he pretended his car was disabled in front of a Liberty Line bus.

Two policemen were assaulted by commuters, strike supporters tried to jam streets and more than 20 private buses were vandalized as the driving rain made Wednesday the worst day for getting around since the transit systems shut down.

Tito remains grave

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — President Josip Broz Tito, 87, remained stabilized in very grave condition today, his doctors said in their daily medical bulletin.

"During the past day there were no essential changes in the condition of comrade president," the bulletin said. "The condition is still very grave.

New York Times

LA JOLLA, Calif. — Saturday is the 25th anniversary of the day, April 12, 1955, when the long-awaited tidings that the vaccine against poliomyetitis developed by Dr. Jonas Salk was "safe, effective and potent" in extensive field trials were made public.

The news set off a national celebration, and Salk became an instant hero. His research, begun in 1949 and financed by the March of Dimes campaign of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, promised the demise of polio. The killed-virus vaccine that he developed proved 80 to 90 per cent effective.

Honors were heaped on the Manhattan-born scientist, among them a Congressional medal. Supporters, in particular the National Foundation, now called the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation, helped him build his dream of a research complex for the investigation of biological phenomena "from cell to society." It was called the Salk Institute for Biological Studies and opened in 1963 at La Jolla. To the public, he is still a scientific superstar.

But Salk's success has not been free of controversy. Five years after the introduction of the Salk vaccine, the incidence of polio in this country had fallen 92 per cent. Yet by 1963, over the protests of Salk and the late Basil O'Connor, head of the foundation, use of the Salk killed-virus vaccine — a vaccine in which a virus is rendered inactive by chemical means although it is still able to stimulate the development of antibodies — was supplanted by a live-virus oral vaccine developed by Albert Sabin. The Sabin vaccine, which immunizes by establishing in the recipient's intestine a harmless infection that produces antibodies, was adopted for what was touted as its greater ease of administration and the supposedly superior immunity it conferred.

Now, Salk says, there is renewed interest in his killed-virus vaccine, particularly in developing countries. "The live-virus vaccine is highly effective in developed countries, even though the introduction of live viruses still entails a degree of risk," he says. "But in the developing countries, where polio is on the increase, the drawback is that the live virus fails to establish the infection that leads to immunity because of intestinal inhibitors in the population."

At the institute, a magnificent complex of laboratories and study units set on a bluff overlooking the Pacific, Salk holds the titles of founding director and resident fellow. His own laboratory group is concerned with the immunologic aspects of cancer and the mechanisms of auto-immune disease, such as multiple sclerosis, in which the immune system attacks the body's own tissues. He is also writing and thinking about what might be called "biophilosophy," the application of a biological, eyolutionary point of view to philosophical, cultural, social and psychological problems.

The biophilosophical approach has led Salk — who has written two books, Man's Unfolding and The Survival of the Wisest — to a basic optimism about the future of the human race.

With a staff of some 420, including four Nobel laureates, and Salk's son, Peter, a researcher in cancer biology, the institute comprises 18 laboratory groups. "The theme that runs through all the laboratories, that unites the work, is that everyone is studying one or another aspect of the control and regulating mechanisms in the various systems of which we as humans are composed," Salk says. "Our range is from the molecular level on up to the study of language as a biological phenomenon."

Looking back to 1955, he expresses mixed feelings:

"In the end, what may have more signficance is my creation of the institute and what will come out of it, because of its example as a place for excellence, a creative environment for creative minds."

All narcissi need immediate attention whether they are trumpet daffodils, large or small cup, doubles, multi-flowered, Poetaz or Poeticus types.

Having enjoyed this year's display, our work now is to improve the bulbs to obtain a comparable or better display next year.

The first step is to remove all flowers which are past their prime, cutting them off just beyond the seed case which is at the back of the flower, leaving the flower stems and foliage to make food and begin forming next year's flowers within the bulbs before the foliage wilts in June.

Seed formed by cross polination will be useless, but producing that seed will severely weaken the bulbs. We are happy to sacrifice the flowers a week before they fade to prevent draining the bulb's energy.

As soon as the flowers have been removed, the surface soil around the planting is lightly loosened with a small hand fork without damaging the bulbs, and screened compost is added.

Next is the application of fertilizer to strengthen the foliage until it fades in June and rebuild the energy the bulb has expended in making this year's flowers.

A bulb and potato fertilizer is used, a 4-10-10 mix which is low in nitrogen so as not to force soft growth, high in phosphorus for good flowers, and high in potash for stiff growth and good roots:

First water the loosened soil, then spread the recommended amount of fertilizer shown on the package over the soil and between the bulbs in each group, but not on the foliage. Dampen the crystals with a spray of water from the hose and leave overnight. The next day water thoroughly to carry the dissolved food down to the roots below the bulbs.

For the next eight weeks apply water every 10 days to maintain healthy foliage, then withhold all water as the foliage ripens.

The bulbs are graded as planting-stock, which are small offsets planted to grow to flowering size two years later; single-nose which should produce one flower the following year; double-nose for two flowers; top size; and mother bulbs, to which 3 or 4 offsets are attached and capable of producing more than two flowers to a bulb.

The price of bulbs is directly related to their size, withtop size and mother bulbs the most expensive. Home gardeners purchasing the cheapest bulbs will have good flowering bulbs in later years if they are given the treatment outlined above.

My last importation of daffodil bulbs was 20 years ago, planting-stock to grow on for the cut-flower trade. As all blooms were cut and sold, the bulbs never used energy forming seed and today are giving a beautiful display as well as a continuous supply of offsets for growing on.

The life of a bulb depends on the soil in which it is planted which should be well-mixed with screened compost to hold moisture, and the treatment it receives each year, excepting the varieties known to be susceptible to the daffodil bulb-fly, the grub eating the centre of the bulb where new flowers are formed. Soft when squeezed in the fingers, these bulbs should be burned in a hot incinerator fire.

When boxes of mixed daffodil bulbs are purchased it is wise to label each bulb with its color and description of the flower (or the varietal name if known) and grow them separately to build up a stock of each type.

LIMA (AP) — Peru's foreign minister said today five South American countries have agreed to give refuge to the thousands of Cubans at the Peruvian embassy in Havana and that his country will accept 1,000 exiles.

He said the exodus will begin "as soon as possible."

Foreign Minister Arturo Garcia y Garcia said the other four members of the Andean Group common market — Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador and Venezuela — will announce their own quotas.

He said countries outside the region also will be invited to participate in the exodus of the 10,000 Cubans if the Havana government allows them to leave the Caribbean island.

The decision was taken during an all-night meeting of the Andean Council, a political arm of the common market.

"The governments of Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador and Venezuela . . . express their ample and profound solidarity with the Peruvian government," the statement said.

Garcia said the Andean Group is in contact with representatives of the UN High Commission for Refugees and the Inter-Governmental Committee for European Migration, two international organizations which assist and protect refugees.

Garcia said that other countries have indicated interest in receiving Cuban exiles but he would not reveal who they are. "Each country will make its own announcement," he said.

Peruvian foreign ministry officials said Colombia, Costa Rica and Canada have agreed to take some of the refugees.

They said the embassy staff in Havana has begun collecting the names of the Cubans, and asking them about their backgrounds and why they want to leave.

Ministry sources also said that a child at the embassy was grazed in the hand by a bullet fired Cuban soldiers who opened up on a man attempting to drive his car into the 20-acre compound Wednesday.

Cubans flocked to the compound last weekend after the government withdrew its security force because one guard was killed at the embassy on April 1 when six people crashed a bus through the gate, seeking asylum inside. They joined 18 others who had forced their way inside earlier asking for refuge.

Cuban authorities are supplying food and sanitary facilities for the thousands at the embassy and have allowed the Red Cross to set up a field clinic there, said Robert Jordan, a spokesman for the U.S. interest section at the Swiss embassy in Havana.

U.S. state department officials in Washington have said they would consider applications from refugees who managed to reach Lima.

So why did hijacker pick Havana?

MIAMI (AP) — The identity and motives of a muscular young man who slipped aboard an American Airlines jet in California, pointed a .45-calibre revolver at a stewardess's head and commandeered the plane for a flight to Cuba remain a mystery, the FBI says.

The seven-member crew was safe, back in the United States, Wednesday night after an 11-hour odyssey that took them from California to Dallas to Havana — where the hijacker gave up — and finally to Miami.

"He communicated very little to the crew," said FBI agent Arthur Nehrbass of Miami. "We don't know who he is. We don't know why he wanted to go to Cuba, so we can't even speculate. Anything is possible."

Even if the FBI identifies the hijacker, described as a young black man in his early 30s, the chances of extradicting him from Cuba are slim, Nehrbass said: "Traditionally, the Cuban authorities have not returned hijackers."

The hijacker scaled a low wall at Ontario Airport 55 kilometres from Los Angeles and entered the Boeing 727, just before 74 passengers were to board the flight to Chicago.

The plane took off 17 minutes later, and after a refuelling stop in Dallas, landed in Havana at 5:18 p.m. Havana time.

The hijacker was relatively calm, Nehrbass said. But when authorities tried to stall the plane during refuelling at Dallas, "he threatened to shoot a stewardess in the leg if the plane didn't hurry up and leave."

The hijacker refused to talk to authorities via the plane's radio, would not go into the cockpit and "communicated very little with the crew."

Poison suspect indicted

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A federal grand jury has indicted accused "Poison Gang" extortionist Richard Quincy Williams on charges he laced supermarket food with cyanide in a bid to obtain diamonds from two supermarkets.

Williams, 46, a part-time horse trainer, was charged with four violations of the Hobbs Act — extortion to the detriment of interstate commerce.

Williams was accused on specific counts of attempting to extort money from a La Jolla jewelry store, placing cyanide in a pickle jar at a Safeway market in La Jolla, poisoning a teriyaki sauce jar in a Pacific Beach Safeway market, and extortion for raising his demand from the jewelry store from 50 to 100 diamonds.

Successor to slain Romero

SAN SALVADOR (UPI) — Pope John Paul II has named the "best friend" of slain Archbishop Oscar Romero as apostolic administrator of San Salvador, the acting archbishop of San Salvador said today.

The appointment, however, was widely considered a papal manoeuvre to depoliticize the controversial Salvadoran church.

"The Vatican has named as of today Monsignor Arturo Rivera y Damas as apostolic administrator of the diocesis of San Salvador," acting archbishop Monsignor Ricardo Urioste said Thursday.

Rivera, 57, formerly the bishop of Santiago de Maria, 62 miles east of the capital, is commonly regarded as a "progressive" for his defense of human rights.

Rivera was the only one of almost half-dozen Salvadoran bishops — most of them regarded as conservative opponents of Romero — to attend Romero's funeral mass in the capital.

As "apostolic administrator," however, Rivera's power as religious mentor in the violence-torn Central American nation will be limited to administrative duties.

In other developments, Deputy Minister of Economics Roberto Solarzano resigned from the shaky military-civilian government, the fourth cabinet minister to quit in two months, and political violence claimed at least 31 dead, including the son of a prominent journalist.

Guerrillas drop ante

BOGOTA (AP) — The guerrillas holding 20 hostages in the embassy of the Dominican Republic cut their demand for the release of political prisoners from 28 to seven, but said they still want safe passage out of Colombia and a ransom from 15 governments.

They also said they may free more captives April 19, the anniversary of their Movement 19, named for the April 19, 1970, elections they claim were fraudulent.

Aborigines disrupt oil exploration

SYDNEY (AP) — Aborigines fearful that oil drilling will disturb the spirit of the great goanna lizard have halted a U.S. exploration company in a remote part of Western Australia.

Rock-hurling aborigines drove off drillers from the Amax Corp. of Greenwich, Conn., last week as they prepared for further exploration on Noonkanbah Station, a 900,000-acre cattle ranch 1,500 kilometres north of Perth. In 1976, the government gave the lease to the ranch to the 200-member Yungngera tribal community because it covers most of their ancient tribal grounds.

The goanna, a type of monitor lizard, is an important part of the tribe's diet. The aborigines believe the spirit of the lizard lives under Pea Hill, a site sacred to them that is near the drilling site.

"The goanna spirit will be disturbed by the drilling," said Dickie Skinner, the chairman of the tribe. "If the spirit of the goanna is disturbed, the next season will not replenish the stocks of goannas."

The unions and the opposition Labor party in the state support the aborigines. But many other citizens support the Liberal government contention that mineral exploration should continue.

Underlying the dispute are the questions of the aborigines' land rights, their royalties from minerals discovered on their lands and the rivalry between the Liberal and Labor parties.

The aborigines were given the lease to the Noonkanbah ranch by the federal government as part of a program to develop an economic base for Australia's original natives, who now number only 136,000 in a population of 14 million.

The government retained control of the mineral rights, as it does with all government land on leasehold in Western Australia. But the aborigines are entitled to mining royalties — through the Aboriginal Lands Trust — on aboriginal reserves, which total 49.4 million acres.

Amax, which refuses to comment on the situation, acquired the exploration rights at Noonkanbah a year ago. The aborigines said two acres of sacred sites were threatened, and the Aboriginal Legal Service took court action to halt prospecting on that land temporarily.

Then the aborigines increased their demands, contending that the whole of the vast ranch should be off limits to the prospectors.

Israelis bolster border thrust

METULLA, Israel (AP) — Israeli reinforcements moved into southeastern Lebanon today, backing up a cross-border thrust aimed at blocking Palestinian guerrilla raids into Israel.

"There is quite a sizeable buildup going on right now, but I have no figures," said Timur Goksel, spokesman for the UN peacekeeping force in the area.

Lebanon's state radio, meanwhile, reported Syrian MiGs flew over Lebanon's Bikaa Valley shortly after Israeli warplanes flew reconnaisance missions over Syrian troop positions in southeast Lebanon and the southern area Israeli troops and tanks invaded on Wednesday.

In Beirut, a Lebanese government spokesman said it was consulting with UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim on prospects for an urgent UN Security Council session on the "explosive situation" created by the Israeli presence.

UN spokesmen and diplomats in Beirut, the Lebanese capital, said more than 300 Israeli troops crossed the frontier on Wednesday and were patrolling an arc more than 15 kilometres long around the southeast corner of Lebanon.

One of the Israeli outposts was in an area controlled by UN peacekeepers since April, 1978. The other two were reported in the 10-kilometre-deep by 95-km-wide border enclave held by Israel's Christian militia allies.

The UN force said seven Israeli tanks and 12 other armored vehicles were deployed near the Lebanese village of Markabe, and 11 tanks, a bulldozer and about 200 soldiers were digging in near the village of Kounin. In addition, soldiers of the Irish UN contingent told diplomats in Beirut that 100 Israeli soldiers and about five armored personnel carriers were seen digging in just east of the Irish-patrolled village of Shakra.

AP photographer Max Nash, visiting the northernmost Israeli town of Metulla, said he saw an Israeli army bulldozer smoothing a road on the Lebanese side of the frontier.

U.S. Olympians face legal bar

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter said today he is prepared to take legal action if necessary to prevent American athletes from participating in the Moscow Olympics this summer.

Carter had previously told American athletes the United States would not send a team, but he made clear in a speech prepared for delivery to newspaper editors today that he would enforce his plan for a boycott even if the U.S. Olympic Committee refuses to go along.

The president compared the Moscow Olympics with the 1936 Games in Berlin, which he said "were used to inflate the prestige of the ambitious dictator Adolf Hitler."

"It is essential that our intentions be absolutely clear," Carter said. "The measures we have taken against the Soviet Union since the invasion will remain in effect until there is total withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan. Then, and only then, we would be prepared to join with Afghanistan's neighbors in a guarantee of true neutrality and non-interference in Afghanistan's internal affairs."

Postal strike looms in May

Union slams employer grievance procedures

VANCOUVER (CP) — Postal union locals across the country are gearing up for a strike that could begin as early as May.

The Vancouver president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers says his local has no choice but to prepare for a strike "in view of the intransigent position of the employer" in conciliation talks.

Lloyd Ingram denounced the attitude of post office management before the conciliation board in Ottawa, and said the local "is left with no alternative but to finalize its strike structure."

Similar statements were being issued by CUPW locals across Canada, he said.

In Montreal, vice-president of that local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, Richard Forget, told a news conference that the union's Quebec locals are gearing up for a strike vote as soon as a federal conciliation team submits its report, expected within the next two weeks.

The union is seeking maintenance of job levels, clarification of existing clauses on compulsory overtime and technologocal change, and improved wages.

"Unless there is some compromise on the part of the Post Office, I don't see how a strike can be avoided," Forget said. "They insist on rolling back all the rights we've acquired since our first contract in 1968."

Clement Morel, a member of the national executive of the union, said there has virtually no progress at bargaining sessions since they began last November. The last contract expired December, 1978.

Morel said the Post Office has ignored precedents established through the grievance prodecure and insists on fighting each of the tens of thousands of outstanding grievances individually.

He said almost 60 per cent of the 30,000 outstanding complaints are related to earlier decisions and could be settled on that basis. Each arbitration is currently costing the government $15,000, Morel said.

A three-member conciliation board headed by retired Quebec judge Germain Jutras has been meeting with union and management negotiators in an attempt to reach a compromise settlement without a repeat of the October, 1978, national strike.

In Vancouver, Ingram said Jutras has told the parties he will end the talks on Monday if no progress is being made. If conciliation fails, Jutras has two weeks, or longer if needed, to write his report to the government.

The union would be in a legal position to strike seven days after that report is received.

LONDON (AP) — The British government expressed "profound regret" today to Saudi Arabia about the screening of a television drama based on the 1977 execution of a Saudi princess and her lover, the British Foreign Office said.

Reports reaching London said the Saudis threatened to break diplomatic relations with Britain, cut off oil supplies and suspend hundreds of millions of dollars in contracts with British firms.

The producers of the film said the program was a dramatized documentary of a scandal that led to the death of Princess Mishaal of Saudi Arabia and her lover in 1977. One scene depicts the lover kneeling beneath an executioner's sword with the body of the princess lying nearby, shot to death.

Sources close to the film said the Saudi government offered "a huge sum of money" to try to stop Britain's ATV independent network from screening the dramatized documentary, but the offer was rejected.

The movie, Death of a Princess, was shown Wednesday night. The U.S. public television network plans to air it later this month, it was reported here. The film was made in conjunction with television companies in the United States, the Netherlands and West Germany.

Charles Denton, head of ATV programming, said Saudi officials previewed the film earlier this week. They had put pressure on the network to cancel or change the film over several months, he said.

"We were unable to see their problems with it and did not change a frame of the film as a result," Denton said.

British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington sent a "message of profound regret" to Saudi Prince Saud about "any offence which the film may have caused," said a Foreign Office spokesman.

"We regret any damage which might be done to Anglo-Saudi relations," the spokesman said. "But of course the government has no power to interfere with the content of a program of this nature."

In the film, the princess, played by an Egyptian actress, rebels against her arranged marriage and goes to Beirut, where she falls in love with a fellow university student. She returns to Saudi Arabia and lives openly with her lover. She admits the adultery in a trial and the lovers are condemned and put to death.

Newspaper accounts published after the execution said the princess was put to death because she rejected an arranged betrothal and married a commoner, and her lover was beheaded. Those reports made no mention of adultery.

Cabinet plumps for F-18A

OTTAWA (CP) — McDonnell Douglas Corp., manufacturer of the F-18A, has been awarded the contract to equip the armed forces with new fighter aircraft, Defence Minister Gilles Lamontagne announced today.

The final decision to buy a minimum of 137 of the twin-engined aircraft — over its competitor, the single-engined F-16 built by General Dynamics Corp. — was made by cabinet earlier in the day.

No final contract price was stated but cost of the planes has been previously estimated at more than $2.3 billion.

The process of the selecting the aircraft, to replace aging CF-101 Voodoos, CF-104 Starfighters and C-5 aircraft now used in North American and NATO defence roles, began in 1975.

But the decision has been dragged out until now because of delays caused by two elections in the last year and wrangles over the distribution of industrial benefits of the contract.

Juvenile correction setup on verge of chaos: report

By DEREK SIDENIUS

And unless alternative ways are found in the community to handle juvenile offenders, chaos will result, the chairman of the Capital Region Justice Council said today.

Dave Turner issued the warning after a report on the provincial juvenile containment program was made public.

Turner said the justice council is so concerned about the situation it has teamed up with the Victoria Family Court Committee and the John Howard Society of Vancouver Island to seek a meeting with Attorney-General Alan Williams.

The report, prepared last fall by Coquitlam probation officer Alan Markwart, said the juvenile containment centres in Burnaby and Victoria are dangerously overcrowded and said one reason for the development is a lack of alternative placement centres in the province.

Del Phillips, director of the Victoria Youth Detention Centre said today the centre has exceeded its 20-bed capacity by as much as 50 per cent in recent months.

Today's count was 24, including 14 on remand and 10 sentenced.

Turner said he is appalled at the revelations in Markwart's report which notes:

— More than half the children contained in juvenile institutions have not committed offences regarded as either dangerous or potentially dangerous to the community.

— A panel of three corrections experts has determined that containment is inappropriate for 45.2 per cent of the juveniles in custody.

— Nearly 85 per cent of probation officers have specifically recommended containment without coming up with alternatives.

— The procedures for recommending containment as laid down by the attorney-general were followed in only one third of all cases; and that, when combined with legislative criteria, the procedures were followed in only 21.9 per cent of the cases.

— There are sufficient provincial resources such as House of Concord, group

Sears, Bay credit 26%

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two of Canada's major department stores are boosting their charge account rates to 26.08 per cent.

The required six-month notices of the increase will be mailed out with the next monthly statement to customers.

The new rate will be 1.95 per cent a month or 23.4 per cent a year. Calculated on the basis of it being a monthly rate, the effective annual rate will be 26.08 per cent.

Other department stores are holding their rates — for the time being.

"We are not contemplating any increase in the rate," said Bruce Stocks, credit manager for T. Eaton Co. Ltd. "However, it will be reviewed on a week to week basis."

Peter Wilhelmsen, credit manager for Woodward Stores Ltd., said he has had no instructions to raise the charge account rate of 20.4 per cent a year, which he said was lower than other stores.

Game fix remark may halt playoff

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Threat of a legal injunction to halt a Western Hockey League playoff game between Victoria and the Seattle Breakers tonight "is a possibility" because of a Victoria player's televised sugggestion Cougars may not attempt to win it.

The threat, said Portland Winter Hawk manager Brian Shaw, was made by a Portland attorney, "not connected with our hockey team," as a result of an interview of Victoria centre Barry Pederson was televised late Wednesday by Portland station KATU.

Crux of the controversy is the second berth in the Western Division's best-of-seven final. Victoria, with a 5-2, won-lost record, already is assured of the first spot. Seattle (4-3) can take the second berth by defeating the Cougars tonight, eliminating division-winning Portland (3-5).

If Victoria wins tonight, Seattle and Portland would be forced into a sudden-death playoff game to decide the issue.

The provincial cabinet is expected today to approve Science Minister Pat McGeer's proposal to spend between $500,000 and $1 million on a feasibility study of a Vancouver Island-mainland bridge-cum-tunnel link.

(Public opinion in Victoria as reflected in the poll being conducted by the Times is running about 5 to 3 against the proposal in early returns. Deadline for ballots to be delivered to the Times' office is 9 a.m. Friday. Due to heavy volume of ballots, results of the poll and readers' comments will not be published until Monday).

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis has already said a study is needed so voters will know what's at stake when they vote on the issue in a possible, province-wide plebiscite.

A decision on the plebiscite idea is probably a year down the road — about the time the feasibility study would be completed.

Each route involves one or more of the Gulf Islands.

The longest and most northerly route would take a long jump from Sturgeon Bank on the Fraser River to the east end of Gabriola Island.

From there it would take short hops to Mudge Island and then to Vancouver Island near Nanaimo.

That route would have no tunnel; instead, 25 kilometres of floating bridge, 8 kilometres of conventional bridge and the rest of the route on land.

A middle route would require 19 kilometres of floating bridge or tunnel from Sandheads at the south arm of the Fraser River on Sturgeon Banks to the north end of Galiano Island. From that point there is a choice of routes via island-hopping bridges, ending either at Nanaimo or Duncan.

The third and most southerly route would extend from Roberts Bank to the south end of Galiano Island, then by bridge to Saltspring Island and to Vancouver Island near Duncan.

That concept calls for 18 kilometres of bridge and 7.2 kilometres of tunnel.

These proposals likely would permit four-lane vehicle traffic travelling at 80 km/h plus two railway lines.

Meanwhile, Sam Bawlf, the ex-cabinet minister who initiated engineering feasibility studies of a bridge-tunnel two years ago, told the Times Wednesday the best estimate of the cost he's seen is $2-$2.5 billion.

It could be self-financing, according to Bawlf's estimates of $270 million

No rate hike

OTTAWA (CP) — The new Bank of Canada rate is unchanged at 16.20 per cent, the same as last week, the bank announced today. It is the first time there has been no increase in the trend-setting rate since the bank moved to a floating rate system in March.
